He was asked: "Do you now give a pledge that National Insurance charges will not go up under Labour's programme?"

Mr Foot replied: "Yes, we are certainly not proposing any such increase. Indeed, we want to in some respects reduce such to in some respects reduce such payments in order to be able to ensure we carry through the expansion.

"Nobody could ever say that no insurance charges should ever be increased, of course not. t depends on some other factors as well, but we have set out very clearly, in our budget, our approach to the matter as the best way of doing it."

In fact, that budget-a statement issued by Mr Peter Shore, the shadow Chancellor, on March 10-and the manifesto, both pledge the abolition of the upper ceiling of £220 a week on carnings-related National Insurance contributions.

The Labour Party, after tong gestation, produced yesterday the document which proved, Mr Michael Foot said, that the Conservatives planned the most serious attack on the National Health Service since it began. Their coup was only partly successful since their document a discussion paper for regional health authority chairmen about cooperation with the private sector, proved to be private, not secret as they claimed.

The Labour Party suspects, and wishes the electorate to suspect, that the Conservative manifesto conceals more than it tells of ministers' intentions, especially towards the social services. Where Conservatives talk of wideoing the field of choice and finding new resources, Labour accuses them of promoting private profit.

The document which partly uncloaks ministers' thoughts. on a topic where the polls suggest the public also has its doubts about the Conservatives, was gold dust yesterday for Mr Roy Hattersley, the shadow Home Secretary, who now has Home Secretary, who now has the chief role in planning the party's morning press confer-

The nuclear question, which in the first two weeks of his electioneering had taken up about 30 per cent of his speeches, has now been relegated to play only a minor role in the run up to polling day, on the advice of party strategists.

Thatcher takes on the rising Alliance

From Philip Webster, Political Reporter, Edinburgh The Prime Minister last night nation summit decision to focus went on the attack against the Liberal-SDP Alliance for the the weekend. She coupled her onslaught against the Alliance leaders with broadsides against Mr Denis Healey, Labour's deputy leader. who is taking a more prominent role in his party's campaign. She accused him of a "cruel, callous scare" over his claim that the Conservatives would undermine or dismantle the National Health Service.

Until last night Mrs Thatcher had not even mentioned the Alliance in her campaign speeches and has spoken of Labour as being the "only alternative government."

Her attack last night, centred on the Alliance response to the outcome of the Williamsburg summit, came at the Scottish Conservative rally at Mr David Steel's old school, George Watson's College in Edinburgh.

on the maintenance of low indicate and the reduction of first time in her election interest rates and budget deficampaign, swiftly reacting to its cits. The Labour Party, the improvement in the polls over Liberals and the SDP (she did not refer to them as the Alliance) criticized that policy and claimed they had a better answer, she said.

"We should stop and ask ourselves whether it is likely that the Labour Party and the Liberals/SDP have got it right and the whole of the industrialized world has got it wrong.

"The last Labour government, in which Mr Healey was Chancellor and the SDP leaders were prominent members, and which latterly the Liberals kept in office, that was the government which had to be rescued by the international community from the folly of the very policies which Labour would now like to try again."

Referring to Mr Healey's press conference on Monday in which he had charged that the Conservatives had planned to dismantle the welfare state, end state education and cease to index-link pensions, Mrs Thatcher said: "I despise that sort of scare campaign, deliberately designed to frighten the sick and the elderly, deliberately and cynically designed by people who know that it is wholly

Mrs Thatcher said: "I have no more intention of dismantling the health service than I have of dismantling Britain's defences"

On the night of the killing last March Mrs Hamilton ran screaming from her home chased by her husband. She hammered on neighbours' hammered on neighbours' doors pleading for help as Hamilton struck her repeatedly with a knife.

Finally she got into a downstairs flat but her husband forced the door, ran after her and continued to stab her. "She fell to the the floor and when the screaming stopped she was dead. Mr Cameron said.

mortem examination showed Mrs Hamilton had been subjected to a ferocious attack. She had more than 50 stab wounds and many of the wounds by themselves would have proved fatal," he said.

Shortly afterwards she ran from neighbour to neighbour trying to escape and several times tried to wrest the knife from him as she was stabbed repeatedly.

Eventually she got into a ground-floor flat but her husband forced the door, ran after her and killed her.

The detectors, which are electronic, are positioned on the edge of the hemisphere and the signals which they generate are fed by a cable to a micreprocessor on the surface. This microprocessor analyses the results by comparing the signals detected by the sensors on the bell with a preset

The researchers liken the effect on the bell to the distortion of the edge of a wine glass. The result of using the sensors and the microprocessor together is "that the modes vibration are fixed relation to the direction of the detected sound waves sufficiently closely to allow its bearing to be determined to an accuracy of better than I

This angle, which accurately outlines the position of the drilling bit, is then displayed in digital form at the surface to allow the drilling engineers to alter direction

The tests have been conducted in a tank by the Ediaburgh researchers, who are satisfied more hostile environments despite its sensitivity. The scientists say: "The modes of vibration are monitored by small, light semiconductor strain gauges mounted around the edge of the hemisphere, which is typically about 100mm in diameter and 1mm thick".

The design will now be subjected to more rigorous testing by the scientists. The device would need to operate with the containing canister immersed in water or drilling mud at extremes of temperature and pressure.

Irish forum to advertise for ideas

Newspaper advertisement are to be used on both sides o secure ideas for debate at the Ireland Forum which met formally for the first time in Dublin on Monday.

Leaders of the forum set up in Dublin's latest attempt to tackle the Northern Ireland crises are particularly keen on hearing from political representatives to take part in the

One of the central criticisms of the forum has been the absence from the pending talks of Protestant politicians from the north, with membership restricted to the three main Dublin-based parties and Northern ireland's Social Democratic and Labour Party, which reflects the views of the province's Catholics.

The Rev Ian Paisley last night attacked the forum. He said unionists would never accept any enticement offered to woo them into "the priest state of the Irish Republic".

There was no doubt, he said Belfast, that the architects of the forum had a united Ireland as their goal." Our answer will always be no. This is not the answer of bigoted, blinded, misled Ulsternen."

The forum will meet again in private in Dublin Castle on June 23.

BA ponders flying picnics for shuttle

A high quality picnic box may be introduced on British Airways domestic shuttle flights this summer to combat increasing competition from British Midland Airways, where slogan is the "friendly independent.

This is perhaps the most attractive option being considered by a British Airways study team under Mr James Harris, head of marketing, to try to hold on to its traffic to Glasgow. Edinburgh, and Belfast against inroads by British Midland, which now has about 30 per cent of the Scottish

The latest British Midlands service is planned for Belfast, using the harbur Ariport at Sydenham, which is closer to the city centre Adergrove, used by British Airways.

British Airways regards Brit-ish Midland's hot-meal service as one of its great competitive provides no food, but is more expensive.

One of British Airways problems is that the concept of a shuttle service is costly to start with. Standby aircraft are needed to ensure that everyone who turns up can fly. The service made a loss for several years and is barely profitable

Cabin staff on shuttle flights are occupied collecting fares from passengers who arrive late, or who find it more convenient to pay on board.

A meal service like British Midland's would require extra cabin staff and could add millions of pounds to shuttle costs in a full year, pushing it back into the red. A picnic box is seen as an attractive compromise between the present no-service formula and a full meal service which would be difficult to justify

But a British Airways spokesman emphasized yesterday that if the picnic box went ahead, it would be no ordinary picnic more the kind of fare people enjoy at Ascot or Glynde bourne. The items being con-sidered for the box, which would be served to passengers on board together with drinks, include small quiches, pinwheel sandwiches, smoked salmon and cocktail sausages.

The future of the shuttle was expected to be settled very soon. the airline said yesterday. The study team would report to Mr Colin Marshall, the chief executive, within three weeks, and a decision could follow almost immediately.

When such transparent absurdity as the theory of nuclear deterrence is professed and earnestly proclaimed by governments around the world, the phenomenon calls for explanation. I daresay that part of the reason lies in the obstinancy with which governments and politicians go on repeating absurdities when once they have committed themselves to

Enormous vested interests

I daresay, too, that in America and possibly elsewhere, enormous economic and financial interests are vested in the continuation and elaboration of nuclear armaments.

I believe, however, that the crucial explanation lies in another direction: the nuclear hypothesis provides govern-ments with an excuse for not doing what they have no intention of doing anyhow, but for reasons which they find it inconvenient to specify.

I will not believe that it is wise or safe or right for the doctrine of the nuclear deterrent to be taken on trust without serious debate or examination on the pretext that those who dare to discuss or examine it must be evilly or unpatriotically disposed.

There are things too important to be left to the experts. There are things too important to be left to the politicians. The nuclear question is one of them. The people at large ought to be enabled to take it in hand, and this election ought to be their opportunity.

Labour fight to keep foothold in rural Wales

Cardiff

An examination of voting trends in Wales over the past decade provides the answer to why Mr Michael Foot chose to make his first main speech of the general election campaign in Carmarthen, a constituency where the main threat to Labour comes not from the Conservatives but from Plaid

No doubt the nationalists were flattered by the acknowledgement that they could gain the one per cent swing required to recapture the seat from Labour but the real reason for Mr Foot's presence which packed out the hall to overflowing was based on broader tactical reasons.

For if the party fails to hold Carmarthen then it could be in a position which seemed a few years ago to be inconceivable of not holding a single seat in rural Wales. Wales like Scotland provides the backbone of any Labour administration in par-liament and therefore the loss of a single seat in the principality will be regarded with dismay within the offices of the Transport and General Workers' Union in Cardiff where the party is based.

Undoubtedly the party is at a disadvantage in the rural areas because of its commitmeat to pull out of the Common Market, particularly at a time when farm incomes are increasing.

What bewilders and dismays the Labour Party in Wales is the fact that in spite of an unemployment level which now exceeds the fore-casts of pessimists and the process of dramatic deindustrialization suffered by the principality under the present Government the Conservatives seem to be gaining ground.

At the last election, when there were effectively 35 Welsh seats because the one held by the Speaker was not contested, the distribution of votes showed that the Socialists gained 47 per cent, the servatives 32 per cent, the Liberals 10 per cent and Plaid Cymru 8 per cent.

'Impartial' broadcasting

BBC chief defends election coverage

By David Hewson

Most combatants in the election campaign would agree that the focus of the vote-gathering circus of all the political parties has shifted from newspapers to television.

This is something of a backhanded compliment for broadcasters since they are keenly aware that it is the immediacy and effectiveness of the medium which attracts politicains; rather than the superiority of its coverage.

In a campaign where personalities appear more important than policies, television becomes the natural testing ground for a candidate's mettle. The more the parties come to see the skilled use of the medium as an important step on the path to power, the more broadcasters are under pressure to ensure that output is "impartial", a quality as mutable as it is desirable. The BBC's broadcasts are affected during elections by the Representation of the People Act. This ensures, for instance, that candidates are broadly barred from broadcasting about constituency issues during the campaign. Each also has a veto dates in the same electoral area.

Two trade unions are curtailing their annual policy-making conferences next week to release nearly 1,500 rank and file activists in a last ditch attempt to win more votes for Labour.

Claiming that the tide of the election campaign had turned in favour of the Liberal/Social Democratic Alliance, Mr David Steel, the Liberal leader, said aged 26, who has changed his name to Margaret Thatcher by yesterday that the two parties were now going all-out to win over the votes of another five million people - "our constitu-ency for victory", he called particulars on the statement of nominated candidates and on the the ballot papers. He arrived wearing a frilly blouse and a pleated skirt over his trousers Mr Steel said the Alliance leaders had last week received reports from the constituencies which showed "a definite movement towards us" and the polls had now confirmed that

Now the Alliance's chance of winning power depended on attracting a further five million. First, there were those who were a strong favourite in a poll of leading environmental workers by the British Association of presently Labour supporters but who had nothing in common with left-wing militancy.

He fully understood their sense of loyalty, but he asked them the question: did they believe that the present Labour Party could stop Mrs Thatcher winning a landslide majority? The only hope of stopping that was now the Alliance.

Three Social Democratic and There were also those Con-Labour Party candidates yester-day endorsed their leaders' servative supporters who Mr Steel called "Conservative humanitarians" or "Tories with pledge to force the Northern ireland issue to the centre of a conscience". They certainly did not want a Labour govern-ment, but neither did they want British politics by carrying out a campaign of disruption in the House of Commons such as sitthe kind of Tory government which they knew they would get if Mrs Thatcher won a runaway Labour's pledges victory.

Those Conservatives now knew there was not the slightest chance of a Labour govern-ment. Therefore they were free to vote for the Alliance without other major industries and to any fear that their vote would construction. Their 17-page let Labour in.

"In the past three days, it seems likely that well over one million people have decided to vote for the Alliance," Mr Steel said. The evidence for that was a matter of mathematics, based on the poli figures.

Asked if the two parties could form a government if those five million votes were forthcoming, he said: "I just do not know for certain. A great deal depends on tactical voting."

At a later meeting in Bir mingham he continued his aggressive attacks on Mrs. Thatcher's economic policies. She was he said "hooked on her own drug-depression." She believed in the hectoring bedside manner, the pain-in-ducing pill, the amputation of

COMMENT

It is carious how much of the election debate is now focusing on the possible size of a Conservative majority. Presumably to correct any false sumably to correct any laise impression created by Mr Pym's earlier indiscretion, in which he expressed his distaste for a landslide, Mrs Thatcher has taken every opportunity to emphasize that she would like as large a majority as possible.

The other parties have responded by raising the spectre of a second Thatcher government in which, in Mr Steel's words, she would be released "not only from the normal controls of our parliamentary democracy, but from the conscience of her own party". Indeed, the danger of a Tory landslide has now become the centrepiece of Alliance strategy. Mr Steel continues to say, for public consumption, that "it is our task not to just overhaul the Labour Party, but to see it we can catch Mrs Thatcher in fime". But everybody knows that that is none

Persuading the less committed

What he is really trying to do is to persuade the less committed Conservative supporters that they could vote for the Alliance, in order to put a brake on Mrs Thatcher in the next Parliament, without jeo-pardizing her chances of staying in office. At the same time he is hoping to convey to Labour supporters that all that now matters is to provide an effective opposition in the next House of Commons – and that therefore they would be wise in a number of seats to vote tactically for the Alliance.

This is causing some con-cern to Conservative Central Office, not because the party office, not because the party strategists are really expecting a landslide of seats - their calculations are more restrained than might be supposed from a quick glance at the national polls - but because they fear that tactical voting for the Alliance might act out of control In a secret. get out of control. In a secret ballot it is impossible for the degree of correction that they want to a general trend. So the Conservative nightmare is that an attempt by numerous voters to provide a modest check upon a second Thatcher government could end by denying them an overall majority, or even by putting Labour in.

How much, then, does the size of a government's majority matter? Is it of much consequence, if the Conservatives are returned to office, whether they have a landslide or not? It is true that as a general rule governments operate more effectively if they do not have too large a majority. Most administrations benefit from being kept on their toes by a strong opposition party. More-over, very large parties tend to become unruly: there are so many frustrated ambitions among the backbenchers, who are soon persuaded that the only way for them to attract notice is to rebel. Disgruntled ministers find ready ears among their MPs, so it becomes harder to hold together a united team.

Ouestion of a landslide

On past experience, therefore, one might expect a second Thatcher government to be a rather better one if it does not have an excessive majority. But that is not an absolute rule, and it is not the only consideration. If the Conservatives win a landslide victory, it will be tranmatic for Labour. The question will be asked, as it was after their third successiive defeat in 1959: can Labour ever win again? A Labour massacre might therefore provide the Alliance with the opportunity for which it has been waiting if it is still in business.

The principal Alliance objective must now be to remain a serious political force in the next Parliament. Talk of overtaking Mrs Thatcher in this election is moonshine. Talk of house sounds were plantilled. power sounds more plausible. but is largely irrelevant to what should be its main purpose. To be in that position, indeed, would be a trap rather than a spring-board. The Alliance has to take a longer view because immediate power is beyond its grasp. It needs a Conservative landslide to shatter Labour, and it needs the fear of a Conservative landslide to win tactical votes for itself.

Last week the Folketing (Parliament) passed a controversial opposition motion calling on the Government to press Nato, against its will, to extend the December deadline for US-Soviet negotiations on intermediate-range nuclear force reductions, as well as a total freeze on nuclear strategic arms while talks continue in Geneva.

The resolution also urged the Government to demand that the British and French independent nuclear arsenals be considered as part of Nato's overall nuclear defences in the arms limitation talks with the Russians. The Government, much to its embarrassment, has to comply with the resolution.

The general, who was released at the end of last week after completing a 45-day prison sentence imposed by General Cristo Nicolaides, the present army commander, had been called before an honour tribunal, formed at the request of General Mario Menendez the Argentine Governor of the Falkland Islands, during the invasion last year, and three other senior generals. These officers held that General Galtieri had acted dishonourably by criticizing them in a public

The honour tribunal, presided over by retired General Eleodoro Sancho Lahoz has not made its ruling public. Never-theless, the military sources say that the verdict, that General Gialiuri is guilty of a serious lack of honour, is virtually a foregone conclusion.

He was charged under disciplinary procedures contained in decree 1180/83, which was published in the official bulletin on May 24, after his arrest had been ordered. This says that honour tribunals can pass three types of sentence: a sanction for a light lack of honour, a sanction for a serious lack of honour, and disqualification for a most serious lack of honour.

If the tribunal's intermediate sentence against the general is confirmed, under another clause of the decree, the army commander, has the right either to harden or to soften the ruling. As the threat of a military confrontation between Syria and Israel temporarily recedes, the rhetoric of the Damascus regime of President Assad is still growing apace. Yesterday, it was the turn once more of the Americans to bear the brunt of Syria's wrath as the government controlled newspaper Al Baath gave warning that American blood might be spilt if a war broke out between Syria and Israel.

Syrian state radio al broadcast the newspape's leading article which in-nounced: "If the United Sates wants to make Arab bloodspill in a war which it prepars for with Israel, this does no mean that American blood we not be spilt as well - all this order to quench President Reagan's thirst for blood."

Mr Lyroudias was glad to accept the offer as his friend was not well and as he was getting older was anxious to have a bedroom of his own. Since then the tenant had been sleeping at No 23. He used the bathroom at No 21 and had all his meals there. No 23 was never used for cooking or

The question for the court was whether Mr Lyroudias was the statutory tenant of No 23, his contractual tenancy having been determined. Whether he was a statutory depended upon the provisions of section 2(1)(a) of the Rent Act 1977. That Act provided

That matter had been considered earlier authorities and it was possession was dependent upon the tenant establishing that the premises were used by him as a home.

The court referred to Langford Property Co Ltd v Tureman ([1949] 1 KB 29); Beck v Scholz ([1953] 1 QB 570); Wigley v Leigh [[1950] 2 KB 305) and Herbert * Byrne ([1964] 1 WLR 519). Those cases were distinct in conception from those in which the issue was whether the premises of which it was sought to retain possession were part of a larger home, that is a home including premises other than those concerned or were in themselves a were used for sleeping only while were used for skeeping only wante the whole of the daytime activities took place in the adjoining premises. The Court of Appeal rejected the right of retention.

Court of Appeal

The judge, having considered the fuded that the tenant occupied No 23 sufficiently to afford him protection under the 1977 Act. The judge did not consider whether No 23 was occupied separately from the adjoining premises as a complete home in itself and that was the question that he should have asked himself. If the judge had done so it was impossible to avoid the conclusion that in the light of authority he would have come to the conclusion that No 23 was not a complete home.

The appeal should be allowed and the right of retention as a statutory tenant of possession to No 23 denied to the defendant for lack of character of a statutory tenant. Leave to appeal to the House of Lords was granted. .

were in fact paid by a third party and even though the third party was also liable for the costs.

Mr Justice Lloyd, sitting with two assessors in the Queen's Bench Division so held, giving judgment in open court, and allowing an appeal under regulation 5 of the Costs in Criminal Cases (Central Funds) (Appeals) Regulations (SI 1977 No 248) from a decision of Master Horne who dismissed an appeal from a decision of the taxing from a decision of the authority at the Central Crimina Court that as a matter of law the liability of a client to his solicitor for payment of solicitor's costs, which was implied in the normal retainer of a solicitor by his client, might be excluded where it was never realistically expected the client would have to bear any costs at all.

Anthony Clover for the appellant: Mr Andrew Collins for the Lord Chancellor's Department. MR JUSTICE LLOYD said that the essential point was whether an employee, who was a successful defendant in a criminal trial, and who had been awarded costs out of central funds, could recover those costs when it was his employers who together. There is a ritual to these occasions, as to everything at Geneva. Nitze is usually host near the start of each round: Kvitsinsky reciprocates towards the middle, and so on.... It was over these meals, where the cutand-thrust gives way to a mood more relaxed and philosophical, that the outline of a compromise took shape last summer.

To a degree that perhaps only Nitze and Kvitsinsky truly appreciate, the objectives of the two sides are mirror images. Washington would like zero SS-20s; Moscow wants zero long-range American nuclear weapons in Europe not just no Pershing or cruise. no aircraft either. Yet both sides are under pressure to compromise: the U.S. because it cannot afford to alienate too much of western European public opinion; the Soviets because they are genuinely worried by the prospect of Paul Warnke, head of the US Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under Carter - and now, unsurprisingly, a critic of Reagan - said of the West's zero-zero proposal: "If this is in fact our final position, then we may well get nothing: zero Soviet reductions and zero deployment in western Europe. . . '

Soviets. If they press too stubbornly for their version of zero, they risk achieving instead zero reductions in Nato deployments. The question each negotiator was seeking to answer last June was whether the other was yet Gromyko. sufficiently worried by this prospect to begin real negotiation. And the answer was that both felt under pressure.

Nitze increasingly doubted whether Europe would, in the end. summon the one afternoon leaning together on the deployments. He thought, in particular, that a combination of Soviet threats and internal unrest could well destroy the resolve of Helmut Schmidt's government in Bonn. He wanted a quick deal before this dawned upon Moscow.

On the Soviet side. Brezhnev wanted what Soviet diplomats in the SS-20s in Europe merely by Washington and Europe were calling exporting it to the Far East. (The "a well-prepared summit" with Reagan. Whether Brezhnev was by then fit missiles from European Russia; they enough is open to doubt. Perhaps that would have to scrap them). he was failing, want a summit agreement - as his final act? Certainly Eugene Rostow, came to believe this. But which of the three sets of East-West arms talks - START; the Euromissile talks; the Vienna conventional force talks - could yield a compromise in time for a summit? Only the Euromissile negotiations. By June, Kvitsinsky was seized of the idea, which Nitze encouraged, that a swift deal at Geneva would open the door to a summit and make his career.

By Moscow's geriatric standards, Yuli Kvitsinsky's career has already been meteoric. Born in 1936 to parents who had come to Russia from Poland, he was an infant survivor of Stalin's purge of the General staff. His aunt was secretary to the great Mashal Tukhachevsky, and when Stalin had him shot in 1937, the Kvitsinsky family found itself in Siberia. But his father, who was also in the army, redeemed the family honour in the Second World War: the tecnage Yuli went to the relatively elitist Moscow University. He had already set his have dolled it up, but every proposal potential was clearly spotted early. By 1970, when he was only 33, he was already the brains of the Soviet delegation to the Four-Power talks which finally settled the status of His performance there - the Berlin agreement took shape when Kvitsinsky "reinterpreted" his instructions in informal talks with his American counterpart - confirmed his standing as one of Foreign Minister Gromyko's high-flyers. After a decade of concentrated grounding in European arms control, Kvitsinsky was named to his first independent command - head of the Geneva delegation - just two days short of his 45th birthday.

To the other Soviet arms-control negotiators, young Yuli is an upstart. Victor Karpov, who heads the Soviet team at the strategic arms talks, cannot stand him. But Kvitsinsky is secure, so long as he satisfies his patron. Gromyko...and so long as Gromyko

So the question most often asked about those talks between Nitze and Kvitsinsky last summer - was Kvitsinsky acting on his own? - is nonsense. "Let me make it clear", he said to Nitze early in the negotiations, estern Europe..."
"I am not risking my career for the The same dilemma confronts the sake of these talks". Ambition for a deal and a summit lured Kvitsinsky to the edge of his instructions and. perhaps, beyond. But he agreed to nothing he was not convinced he had at least a fair chance of selling to

> By mid-June, when the conversations began in earnest, the formal talks were at deadlock.

Slowly, over lunch and dinner and will to carry through the planned rail of a pleasure steamer on Lake Geneva, Nitze and Kvitsinsky reduced their positions to five parameters - the basics they needed to sell any deal back home. Four of the criteria were Nitze's; Kvitsinsky had only one:

> No compensation to Moscow for British and French missiles.

 No deal that solved the problem of Soviets could not just withdraw was the point. Did Brezhnev, knowing

No deal that, as a by-product, emasculated America's conventional perhaps to sign an arms-control capabilities in Europe. (No slashing cuts in US aircraft which, though Nitze and his boss, ACDA director capable of carrying nuclear weapons, have primarily conventional, nonnuclear roles).

Any limitations must be, in substance and appearance, equal. Kvitsinsky's: no zero-zero. His people, he said, rejected that as unilateral disarmament. (But it had also become clear in the formal talks you make has four common elements. One, you wind up with a large number of SS-20s in Europe. Two, there are no constraints on what you deploy in the Far East. Three, we wind up with zero Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Europe. Four, radical constraints are put on our aircraft. Now I take it you don't want to move on any of those unless you are sure of getting a real deal for it, otherwise you just weaken your trading position. So it that is true of both sides. What we need to do is to work out something which could be a complete agreement. Kvitsinsky was morning, they drove to a small restaurant famous for its cooking in the village of Saint-Cergue, in the foothills of the Jura mountains half-an-hour out of Geneva. There, after lunch, they set out for a walk in the woods. Three hours later, they had agreed a deal each thought he could sell back home.

Kvitsinsky began the walk with a surprise. He had told Gromyko of the conversations and this planned outing. he said. Nitze was surprised because so far Kvitsinsky has insisted on total secrecy - not even the rest of the Soviet delegation knew of the private talks -Their final conversation was to be and Nitze had thought Kvitsinsky over lunch in Nitze's apartment in wanted an idea of the possible deal Geneva on July 16; but the evening before telling Moscow. Then there is no point coduing this walk". Nitze said. "Thers no way I could sell, or would wan sell, such an agreement".

me as I entered the Hilton Ballroom and asked me if I would say grace before the Pye Colour Television lunch. I ascended the platform and, standing like a ventriloquist's dummy behind the dignitaries at the top table. I said into a microphone "For what we are about to receive may the Lord make us truly thankful", and went back to my humble position at table 27. I am. in fact, always inordinately grateful for any food; it's something that seems rather hard to come by in the hurly-burly of life today. I can eat before the show and risk going to sleep or being sick on stage, or wait until midnight.

Since my trip to Hunza, in the Himalayas, I have eaten apricots every day, and because I can't get kernels I cat almonds instead. (This is, I believe, the cure for most known ills). At school, we had to be truiy thankful for some very desperate fare. I have an undimmed memory of a vivid pink blancmange vhich we called Face cream because it tasted of Nivea, and Sunday Special, which came in a glass bowl and consisted of layers of the week's left-over puddings looking like a section showing antediluvial strata of the earth. Face cream. Boiled Haby, Toenail Sludge, Auntie's Leg: sweet remembered carillon of youth.

Posting some letters in the late afternoon, I encountered a duck and drake who came waddling unexpectedly out of one of the grander driveways and began to cross the road. Cars were hurtling down upon them so I sprang out to do traffic duty. Eventually I shooed them back on to the pavement. I waited till the coast was clear and then tried to usher them over. They had found a good puddle, however, and were dibbling about with their bcaks, and wouldn't move. I couldn't leave them there: They were obviously aiming for Holland Park, two streets away. "Yah, ducks". I shouted, clapping my hands. With pained expressions, they took off and sailed out of sight. A schoolbov was wathching me. With the injured neck back in position, we set off to film the commercial. fluttering from him like confetti after his acclaimed work on Brideshead Revisited, directed us through a loudhailer like an eccentric ringmaster. "I shall be the church bells. Look at the church when I strike. Bong! Bong!" This is the stuff you never see on your screens; when the tiny film is shown, we shall be the envy of the viewing public as we lounge effortlessly under a tranquil English heaven, scoffing food and laughing in the sunlight. The camera will never show the broken bicycle chain, mauve shuddering arms and boggy ground, but that is part of the attraction of the game. I like filming as much as anything I can think of I was waiting for my final appoint-ment with my genius osteopath when the door opened and in walked Gareth Hunt. As I have seen five of the 26 episodes, I shall record them on my machine and watch my past life flashing before my eyes as the shadows lengthen.

It is the strangest feeling after working your hardest on something publicly. Thousands who have never heard of you or your show immediately conclude that you are a spectacularly dull menace, plodding through an evening of unredeemed boredom. Thousands more, reading a different paper, rush to see your smash hit before it sells out. It is Kiplings triumph and disaster on a smaller scale and has nothing to do with the six performers who pi nightly to normal audiences which and cry and clap, and occasionally shout "Bravo" or nod off to sleep.

We have had people who feel sick and can't get out, someone doing up their shoes on the edge of the stage during a love song, a noisy child which we bribed into silence with sticky cake, and a full-scale drama of a wretched woman who was carried out past the piano while we said Very big. Sometimes the stage has to be repainted and our feet go "squack Squack" as we try to glide to and fro. But oh! those happy moments when you can hear a pin drop, or the roars of laughter hold up your next line, or when the handkerchiefs flutter out like doves after the sad bits. It is, at once, all important and quite unimportant. Let us sayour the delights of the moment, Diesen Kuss der ganzen

A suicide in the family

After his son died, Pete Murray took to non-stop work to overcome his grief. Liz Hodgkinson hears how he coped

How does a parent come to terms with the suicide of a child? The simple answer is that you don't, said Pete Murray, the disc jockey, whose son Michael killed himself nearly two years ago.

Today Murray gives the first of a series of lunchtime talks held at the St Lawrence Jewry Church in Covent Garden, where celebrities tell how they coped with tragic and traumatic events in their lives.

Outwardly, Pete Murray appears composed. He is fit, lean and tanned and, at first, doesn't seem weighed down by grief. He was back on the air two days after hearing of his son's death, and has been hard at work ever since.
He lives with his second wife,

Tricia, a barrister, in Wimbledon. When you talk to him, the showbusiness facade fades as he tell how his life has been affected by this most harrowing of parental experi-

There is not a day goes by when I don't think of Michael", he said. "Even now, I try to avoid being in places where he and I used to go together. It can't be avoided completely, but I find that places have the power to bring back the most agonizing grief. Some people were surprised when I went back to work so quickly. I didn't feel like work and, at the time, I never wanted to work again. But I knew I had to get on with the rest of my life and, in fact, working hard really was able to talk about Michael quite easily and calmly. I realize now, though, that I was in a state of profound shock for about six months. I put myself on to automatic pilot, and went through the motions of carrying on as normal." He broke down only once and that was in public, on Tyne Tees

"I think that was when the reality of his death at last sank in," he said.
"It came home to me finally that a young man with a good future before him had died, and that no amount of talking, heartsearching or grieving would ever bring him back. I feel that over the past 18 months I have been through a very abnormal and unusual experience, and it has great need to remain responsible and not let myself go. But I have asked myself over and over again: why did he have to die? I have spent a lot of time in churches, I've been to see mediums, but I've found no answer. do envy those who can find comfort in religion, but for me there

Michael Murray, known professionally as James, was 28 when he died, an actor, and outwardly extrovert and happy. "Nobody would ever have guessed that he suffered from the most terrible black depressions," his father said. "It was during one of these that he took his own life. He had been drinking at the time. He only drank when he

"The very hardest thing for me has been not to blame myself for what happened. Of course, I've tortured myself by wondering where I went wrong, and asking myself whether his death could have been prevented by more vigilance, better treatment. But that line of thinking just drags you and everyone else down and achieves nothing

"I am sure that through Michael's death I have become a stronger and better person. Nothing worries me any more, as nothing can possibly matter, compared with a young affected my view of everything, man's life. It seemed supremely "After Michael's death, I felt a important to me, after Michael's death, not to crack up myself. So I didn't turn to drugs of drink."

Murray has never drunk and has strong views about avoiding alcohol at times of stress.

"I know I would have been completely disgusted with myself if I had been weak enough to try to find solace in mind-altering drink or drugs. Drink is a common way of dealing with deep problems, but it doesn't make them go away, and causes tensions rather than releasing them. It doesn't help the grief to dissolve, and all that happens is that your health and mental state suffer."

After the tragedy, Murray found that all last year he was far more emotional than usual. "For instance, was very badly affected by the Falklands war. While others were praising heroic actions, I just saw all these healthy young men dying so pointlessly. What was it all for? I realise now that there is nothing more important than life, but most of the time we are so casual about it. We all think we are immortal, until death comes close."

Murray was divorced from his first wife 20 years ago, and Michael was brought up mainly by his mother. From the age of 17 to 21, he lived with his father. "We had a fantastic relationship," Murray re-calls, "After he died, I had letters from people who had known us both, saying how they envied our relationship. But nothing could stop Michael from succumbing to these overwhelming depressions.

"As a father, I don't see what more I could have done to save him. He was what he was, and I just cannot feel responsible. He was having treatment which I think did him some good, but I have a conviction that even if I had been with him 24 hours a day, I couldn't have prevented the tragedy.

"For a long time, I found it easier to talk to strangers, people who hadn't known Michael, than those who were close to me. Michael died in August and it wasn't until October that Tricia and I felt able to go away together, and face each other. We just buried ourselves in work until then".

As a long-standing household name, Murray has had to live out his private grief in full public glare. For some, this might have proved too great a strain, but he felt that being a well-known name actually made life easier. "I had literally thousands of letters from the public", he said. "Everybody was very kind. In showbiz, you find that very many people have had appalling tragedies in their lives, and it's partly this that gives them the strength to perform, and carry on. "I was bombarded by the press liter the event, of course, and had toread the story in every paper, but nobody was nasty. Complete strangers have come up to me in all sorts of funny places, and offered words of consolation. I prefer this to embarrassed silence. Some people, of course, have avoided me because they thought I would be emotional about it, and break down, and make life unpleasant for them.

"And there have been those who have actually walked away from me, as if they didn't want to come so close to death. But for me, it has always been a safety valve to talk. I knew that attempting to bottle it up would be the worst thing, as it would then all seethe away underneath. Grief has to be expressed, but in one's own way". Murray feels his sanity has been preserved through his involvement in sport. "I play a lot of tennis, golf and cricket", he

"It is a wonderful way of taking your mind off worries. I did ity jogging, but that didn't work at all. as I kept churning over thoughts about Michael as I ran. My advice now to anybody trying to deal with bereavement is to involve yourself as much as possible, to be really active, and feel you are still useful. But you must take part only in things which are really you. I didn't read lots of philosophical books that wouldn't have been right for me. I had to be doing things all the time.

Murray promotes the work of the Mental Health Foundation. "Six weeks before Michael died, he came with me to a charity function organised by the MHF", he said. Afterwards, I felt I wanted to keep in touch, as I admired the work they were doing". His talk today is in aid of their funds.

"I like the MHF because it tries to help ordinary people and not just the mentally handicapped. If we could only get to grips with depression, we wouldn't need to spend so much money on researching other illnesses. People become ill mainly as a result of stress. I felt it was vital that I didn't allow undue stress to build up in me. Talking about my son's death does, in a strange way, allow the stress to flow

"I have had a very rare experience and I feel I must now put it to use. It has been a learning experience for me, and has shaken up all my previous values. Eventually I might be able to answer that question that still haunts me: why did Michael have to die? Was he doomed, or could his depression have been helped? The answers won't help Michael now, but they could perhaps save another young person in his position."

The aubergine is a versatile beast

Pictures of perfect tomataoes, melons, peppers and aubergines were beamed into our homes last week from Chelsea. In the programme I saw on the flower show. television gardener Peter Seabrook colour of the varieties being grown but not a word about their taste. The only indication that all this glossy produce was even edible was his observation that some green perpers, which were well on the way to being tea chests, were just right for stuffing with mince. The aubergines were huge, too, good only for chopping up or puréeing; quite useless for stuffing. Even a half of one of these monsters was enough for two people.

Technically, aubergines, peppers and tomatoes, are fruit. In the eastern Mediterranean and Black Sea areas they are combined with jam. And in Armenia, thumb-sized aubergines are preserved in heavy syrup spiced with cinnamon and cloves and scented with rosewater. Everywhere they are grown - from Portugal westwards across the whole of southern Europe and the Middle East to Asia, whence they came, aubergines are made into fritters fried in olive oil. In most of these places they are also stuffed to be eaten cold, and in the South of. France, they are baked with cheese to be eaten hot as a dish on their own, or as a vegetable with meat. The salting, rinsing and drying of aubergines called for in most recipes is intended to draw out bitterness. By attracting liquid from the spongy flesh its capacity to absorb oil is usefully reduced, too. To reduce still further the quantity of oil required aubergine, they can be brushed with oil and browned under a very hot

Fragrant olive oil, and plenty of it is called for in the preparation of imain bavildi which means "the priest, or holy man, fainted." Much has been written about why he swooned. Whether he was overcome by the extravagance of the recipe, or by its flavour, is anyone's guess.

Chop and salt the flesh taken from the aubergines and leave in a colander to drain. After an hour or more, rinse the shells and pulp thoroughly and dry both with a clean cloth or kitchen paper.

Heat half the oil in a frying pan and fry the onion until it is tender. Add the garlic and fry for a moment or two before stirring in the aubergine pulp, chopped tomatoes and pepper. Cook the mixture on a medium heat until the peppers are tender and most of the liquid has evaporated. Off the heat stir in the raisins, pine nuts or almonds, and the allspice, salt and cayenne. Put the remaining oil in an oven dish which will hold the aubergine shells in one close-fitting layer. Arrange the shells in the dish and divide the stuffing between them. ### This is about a profoundly deaf child's first two terms in comprehensive school alongside 850 hearing children. In 20 vears' time, or maybe more, it might be usual for such children to go to their local school; but now it is not. When we first recognized that our daughter, Sarah, would benefit from being taught alongside hearing hildren, resistance to the move from the special education system was enormous. Even when Sarah was up to the academic standard of hearing children of her age she was still denied access to her local

At the age of 10 and after a long and harrowing fight she was allowed to attend her local Catholic primary school. She was slightly above average in most subjects, and below in only maths. She had been denied access to the school on the emund that the partially hearing unit she attended 12 miles away from home could offer her an education the ordinary school could not. This is where the special system was and is-fundamentally wrong, Since being in local schools, Sarah has achieved in all ways, far quicker and far more than was ever possible for her alongside deaf children. She is also happier than ever before, because she "belongs". So why did we choose a local so why did we choose a local comprehensive with ostensibly no awareness or experience of deginess, no training, and no specialist teachers or equipment? We chose it because of what it offered other this continuous and it is continuous. children: its ordinariness and normality. For a deaf child they are the key.

Sarah began her formal education at four and a half at a school for the deaf; at six she travelled to an infant, and then junior partially hearing unit (both of which were largely responsible for making a transition 10 an ordinary school possible) until her move to the local school at ten. At 11 we had the choice of applying for her to go to the only grammar school for the deaf (boarding), the school for the deaf again, or we could pay for her to go to a private school with fewer pupils. Alternatively there was a comprehensive with a unit 11 miles away.

After considerable thought we chose the comprehensive because Sarah was deaf. We chose it despite the fact that she would have only half an hour a week with a visiting teacher of the deaf, and even though the other options meant more individual and specialist attention. We chose it because hearing children in the community were a reflection of life. In the hearing children's acceptance of Sarah - and therefore her acceptance of herself in their midst - Sarah would be prepared for that life. The staff's attitude and willingness to teach Sarah were vital for her integration and happiness. When we approached the headmaster he seemed surprised that we feared he might not be prepared to accept Sarah's entrance to the comprehensive we were still unsure whether she could cope. A primary school with one class teacher to lipread is infinitely different to a school with many teachers, a tight schedule, a varied curriculum, and hundreds of other pupils to consider.

This is when Sarah took hold of the situation herself. She wanted to continue with her many primary school friends into the comprehen-

She pulled herself up in areas of weakness until she was competing equally with her bright friends in all subjects. So what does it mean to be profoundly deaf in a comprehensive school? Few will comprehend the extent of the handicap (mainly because it is well hidden) nor understand the depths to which it has taken the sufferer in the past. It is lonely to be among people who are unaware of the implications of deatness. Without an aid, Sarah would not hear the sound of a pneumatic road drill

With an aid Sarah hears words in a distorted fashion, the teachers had no objection to wearing a microphone which was radio-linked to a hearing aid she wears on her belt (which in turn is linked to two ear level hearing aids) but often thought not to be working when Sarah didn't. respond. She relies mainly upon lipreading - a face turned to the blackboard makes her more cut off than if someone had switched off her aid. Friends proved indispensable to Sarah, and her circle has widened at the school and she has never felt left out. Her friends automatically repeat jokes and without protecting her in a smothering way they ensure she is as informed as they are.

Deafness demands nationee, tolerance, understanding, generosity and thoughfulness. Such caring qualities as these, practised by Sarah's friends each day are those which any school or parent must desire. The accept-ance of Sarah by all in her class as "normal" and as such unworthy of comment has already achieved our

Of course there were difficulties. At first Sarah was exceptionally tired: the concentration needed for listening, guessing, searching for the source of a question and again the features hairdressers answer, lipreading a host of new faces, was immense. She complained regularly of not understanding teachers, of them mumbling, talking too fast or turning away from her. Yet she seemed to be tackling increasingly complex work with a reasonable understanding.

Sarah was extremely happy and as the weeks went by the times when she did not understand grew rarer until they did not occur at all. The teachers, to whom we are eternally grateful, faced her, spoke clearly, checked that she was understanding repeated instructions and placed her near the front of the class.

Why we can all take hope from Labour's ruin

The sight of Mr Foot hanging himself higher and higher with every shifty, gaseous, unfinished, verbless, unintelligible sentence he emitted like ectoplasm in reply to Mr Brian Walden's patient, courteous, deadly questions on Sunday's Weekend World was so distressing (and I Habemus Papam. speak as one who has said some very offensive things about Mr Foot) that I switched off two-thirds of the way through: I felt like a member of

It is impossible not to experience a spasm of disbelief at the recollection that the Opposition (and remember that Mr Foot was chosen as leader when the choice was still confined to the Parliamentary Labour Party) decided four-fifths of the way through the twentieth century and in a free and secret ballot, to select this quavering old Struldbrugg as the most fitted to challenge Mrs Thatcher's Conservatism, and to govern the country in the event of the challenge succeed-

Greenpeace watching a month-old seal pup beating its own brains out.

I say this not in the spirit of a Jewish funeral, at which all the mourners are obliged to throw a spadeful of earth on to the coffin, but because there is a lesson for the future in it. In search of the meaning of that lesson let us first remind ourselves of the remarkable pattern of voting among Labour MPs in November 1980, when they were choosing a successor to Mr Callag-

On the first round, Mr Healey had a commanding lead with 112 votes to Mr Foot's 83: Mr John Silkin, that zero of a thousand battles, momentarily persuaded 37 of his parliamentary colleagues to behave as though they shared his belief in his manifest destiny; and Mr Peter marker for a future election, brought up the rear with 32. The rules provided for a second round, if no absolute majority was secured; the outcome was a victory for Mr Foot by 139 votes to Mr Healey's 129.

In those figures, it can be said, lies the explanation of the condition in which the Labour Party now finds itself. It can reasonably be assumed that all or most Labour MPs want to win general elections: it should therefore follow that the man they elect as their leader is the one whom they judge most likely to bring about that result. But they could hardly have believed on this occasion that it was Mr Foot who best fitted the specifications of the job. They knew that Mr Healey was tough, unscrupulous, hungry for power, tireless, shrewd and pos-sessed of the mind of an intellectual and the soul of a gangster; they knew also that Mr Foot was weak, clumsy, easily wrong-footed, incapable of leadership, devoted to living in the past and mentally lazy. Yet many of those who were not already ideologically committed to him, that is to say the "floating voters" of the PLP, chose him in preference to Mr Healey, and thus precipitated the train of events which has since led, with an awful inevitability, to a point at which the man who would be prime minister if Labour won the election can think of nothing more useful to do when addressing a meeting at Oxford than accuse Lord Hailsham of "licking Hitler's boots" 45 years ago. (Mr Healey could think of three dozen better lies than that in a quarter of an hour, and you wouldn't need to be an OAP to understand what he was talking about when he told them).

elected leader of the Labour Party by the party's MPs because they wanted a quiet life, and believed that he would be likely to provide it. They believed that if Mr Healey became leader the struggle between the factions for control of the party would continue; so desperate were they for it to stop that they managed to persuade themselves, in the teeth of reality and indeed of sanity, that it would stop if they voted Mr Foot into office. Si monumentum requi-

ris, circumspice. But what lesson for the future is to be derived from this sad episode from the past? It is that the choice has still to be made between the factions; in the ashes of defeat the Labour Party will be obliged to decide on its character, its function and its aim. Is it a revolutionary Marxist apparatus for bringing about "fundamental and invevers-ible" changes in the nature of our society and able to accommodate Mr Arthur Scargill's demand (his word) for the nationalization of the newspapers, together with Mr Pat Wall's longing to abolish the monarchy and remodel the police force along the lines of the East German Vopos? Or is it a political party, appealing for mass support among the British peoiple, and devoted to the kind of reforms that the British people are willing to

Until now, the answer has been "both", and it has been a lie, for it can no more be both than a door can be open and shut at the same time, or for that matter than a defence policy can be simultaneously unilateralist and multilateralist. The value of an enormous defeat for Labour next week lies not only in Britain's escape from being governed by a man and a party so palpably unfit for such responsibility; much more important is the opportunity it will provide for Labour, having disposed of Mr Foot immediately, to face the totalitarian enemy within its (and our) gates and embark at last on the final struggle:

, and think not, Percy, To share with me in glory any Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere: Nor can one England brook a double reign . . .

Let no Tory look forward to a massive defeat for Labour without recognizing that a healthy and creditable left-of-centre party is essential to our democratic process. (Mrs Thatcher shows no sign of realizing this. She should read a good life of Baldwin.) Sooner or later, the Tories will lose an election; it is said that the Athenians banished Aristides because they were sick and tired of hearing him called the Just, and a similar fate is inevitably in store for Mrs Thatcher, even if she is 90 before it befalls her. We can write any number of scenarios against that day, such as a wider Alliance taking in the right of the present Labour Party, but detailed speculation is profitless. What matters is that we should have an alternative to Conservatism which will not set out to turn this country into a replica of Bulgaria. If the ruin which Mr Foot's leadership has brought upon the Labour Party leads to the creation of such an alternative, then those Labour MPs who chose him in a spirit of pure cowardice will have accidentally done us all a service.

How long now can Brezhnev's protegés survive?

In the study of what one Moscow wit has dubbed Andropology, one question remains unanswered: how far is Mr Andropov prepared to go to root out the Brezhnevites and impose his own stamp on Russia? We should soon have the answer. On June 14 the Central Committee holds its first full plenary session since last November, shortly after Mr Andropov came to power.

Personnel and policy changes which have been gestating since then will come to the surface. There has been only one Politburo change in more than six months, and there is an air of expectation, especially now that the death of the little lamented Arvid Pelshe at the age of 84 has reduced the Polithuro to 11

Mr Brezhnev himself is hardly mentioned nowadays. Mr Andropov's distaste for the Brezhnev style of ostentatious leadership is well known, as is his view that the latter Brezhnev years were lax, inefficient and lacking direction.

These sins are to be replaced with the virtues of discipline, efficiency and purpose. So far, however, the first two have been more talked about than practised (a Russian disease), and the purpose has not been clearly defined.

The most significant of the senior Brezhnevites still in place is Mr Konstantin Chernenko, the stocky, 71-year-old party administrator who was Brezhnev's own choice for party leader. There are rumours that Brezhnev left a "last testament naming him as successor.

Mr Chernenko recently returned to public life after an absence attributed by his office to "a cold" and by others to "pneumonia", and, as secretary responsible for ideology. is due to make the main report to the Central Committee meeting. Pravda recently published a laudatory review of a book by Mr Chernenko on party organization, but he has lost a great deal of the power he previously had over party patronage, and is widely seen as weak. The same is true of Mr Nikolai Tikhonov, the Prime Minister. At 78 he is liked and respected but is not seen as a suitable exponent of the tough policies of the Andropov era.

Someone who is, or would like cople to think he is, is Mr Geidar Aliyev, the former party chief in Azerbaijan who was catapulted into the Politburo and the deputy premiership last November. He is 59, suave and able, and brought with him to Moscow the reputation of a man who had managed the economy of Azerbaijan successfully.

The question is whether Mr Aliyev, who used to praise Mr Brezhnev with an almost oriental extravagance, is really an Andropov man. In his swift rise to power he has made enemies, and they are putting it about that he is more of a disciplinarian than an economist (he was once head of the KGB in Baku).

Soviet prime ministers are traditionally technocrats, and someone like Mr Vladimir Dolgikh might fit the bill. Also 59, but with a track record of industrial efficiency, Mr Dolgikh is not a full Politburo member, and this might be his last chance to become one.

The economy is certainly Mr Andropov's main worry. It is not expected to dominate the plenum, however, if only because the low-key debate on decentralization and industrial reform over the past six months in the Soviet press and behind the scenes has not been resolved. It is symptomatic that what was supposed to be a full-scale plenum on agriculture in April turned into a curious interim meeting of regional party secretaries at which Mr Andropov merely suggested that agriculture needed to be reorganized. A key figure in his economic plans is Mr Nikaolai Ryzhkov, who was promoted to central committee secretary last November and is supervising a restructuring of the confused economic bureaucracy.

Also in the ascendant is Mr Mikhail Gorbachov, who is only 52 and a Politburo member with responsi-bility for agriculture. He recently got lengthy television exposure during a visit to Canada, when he came across to Soviet viewers as smiling, urbane and articulate. What is not clear is how many Politburo members will be ready to back Mr Andropov if he decides to press his campaign against corrup-tion and inefficiency and point Russia in a new direction. He has key Politburo members such as Marshai Ustinov, the Defence

Minister, on his side, but is opposed by others, including the powerful Ukraine party chief, Mr Vladimir

One of the cards he holds is the vacant presidency, a post he has not so far combined with that of party leader, as Mr Brezhnev did.

The Soviet Union has been without a head of state since November, a situation which may well be rectified at the Supreme Soviet which follows the plenum. It could be Marshal Ustinov although he and Mr Andropov do not wish to give the impression (least of all to peace movements) of a military-KGB government. It could be Mr Gromyko, but he is needed to coordinate foreign policy. Mr Andropov himself might become president, or he might reduce the post to its former nominal role and pass it to some colourless figure such as Mr Viktor Grishin, the Moscow party boss.

Either way the jostling for position should (unless the presidency remains vacant yet again) give Mr Andropov a further opportunity to reshuffle his pack. It will also focus attention on constitutional anomalies: although the head of state is confirmed by the praesidium of the Supreme Soviet, it is not stated who elects him, or how, Equally, it is not clear whether the post of chairman of the Supreme Defence Council - in effect, commander-in-chief - which Mr Andropov apparently holds (though no announcement has been made) goes automatically with either the party leadership or the presidency or conceivably both.

Asked if they can explain the procedure, officials either look blank or say that the matter is "much too and given a run at the last election, with singularly little effect of the kind required. What Captain Gavrilov and our own dear Labour Party had not taken into account is that from is not necessarily a boo-word, as in the Iron Curtain or the Iron Maiden of Nuremberg, who was even spikier than Mrs Thatcher can be on occasions. In British English it also has strong positive political connotations, implying resolution and courage, as in the Iron Duke, Cromwell's Ironsides, and going back 10 centuries, Edmund Ironside, so called from his iron armour.

Captain Gavrilov should have thought of the hurray-sobriquet Stalin, Man of Steel, even if he has forgotten about Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor. I do not think that Mrs Thatcher's opponents will persevere with the Iron Lady in this election.

much good. I dare say that they intend to imply by it that our Prime Minister is belligerent, aggressive, bloodthirsty, jingoist, irrational; and trying to extract more mileage from the Falklands Factor than is decent. They forget that beligerence, aggression, jingoism, and the rest are electoral virtues rather than vices. They also forget that the Queen of the Iceni was our earliest national heroine, commemorated by everything from a sympathetic speech in Tacitus ("Then you will win in this woman, plan to do - let the men live in slavery if they prefer.") to the statue on the Embankment in that chariot with scythes on the wheels that is such a discouragement to those of us who get a puncture there on Friday night in the middle of the Gadarene rush to the country.

Boadicea, intended as an insult, is in fact in election time a compil-ment and an asset. So, as it happens, is Worzel Gummidge as an insulting sobriquet for Michael Foot. Those who use it underestimate the attraction that the name has for those of us who buy our suits from Moss Bros Dead Men's department. We outnumber the other sort.

I put it forward as a tentative political axiom that nicknames are in effect friendly, whatever their intention. From Peanuts and Tricky Dicky to the Iron Lady and Worzel Gummidge, the sobriquet is a sign of familiarity, which is as near as a politician is going to get to affection.

I worry about those, like Roy Jenkins, who do not attract them.

After the poll is over ...

Political commentators are blessed marvellously short memories. Last summer, in conver-sation with a highly experienced lobby correspondent, I was bewailing the fact that ministerial office had halved my income and doubled my workload. "Well", was the unfeeling reply, "you'd better get used to it - you're stuck with it for another few you're stuck with it for another five years, and no mistake." another five years, and no mistake."

(He was wrong about that, but no matter). I couldn't resist reminding him that when we had met at the party conference in Blackpool only nine months previously he had assured me that a Tory debacle when the next election came was already increased.

already inescapable. Back in 1960 the conventional wisdom, in the aftermath of the third sucessive Tory victory, was that Labour could never hold office again, and four short years later Harold Wilson was comfortably ensconced in Downing Street. By 1968 it was the Tories' turn to be written off. Labour had become "the natural party of government." Two years later Ted Heath was in charge. So let us keep our fingers crossed. With eight days to go to polling day, though, it is perhaps permissible for a mere spectator to speculate about how the face of British politics would change if Labour gets the drubbing that the polls predict. For in that case the 1983 election would in that case the 1983 election would turn out to be the watershed which has been too often rashly promised in the past.

First, the Tory party. The vision of a horde of hard-faced petty bourgeoisie trampling on the toes of sensitive Etonians and consigning the nobility and gentry to the trashcan of history is a product of the fevered imagination of the Belgravia school of politics. A large majority would certainly create problems of party management, if only because the prospects of preferment for any individual would be numerically diminished. And Parliament, like nature, abhors a vacuum: if the electorate fails to supply a substantial opposition, the ruling party has to perform that service for itself. But there is no evidence that I know of to sustain the proposition that the attitudes of Tory candidates liable to be swept to Westminster on a heavy tide would transform the balance of opinions and prejudice in the party

The implications of the polls for the opposition parties are more fundamental. The SDP, it seems, is heading for decimation (using that much-abused word in its literal sense). That would be a pity. There was a lot of talent in the SDP ranks

The Liberals, by contrast, were not a particularly impressive bunch yet it looks as though they will be the beneficiaries. of any significant tactical voting that may materialize.

But it is on the Labour side that the changes could be most profound. And not just, or most significantly, in Parliament. The union leadership would surely have to come to terms with a transformed environment.

Most of them, unfortunately, are Labour Party magnates first and industrial negotiators a pretty poor second. Nevertheless some – the electricians and the engineers – could snap their links with Labour fairly swiftly.

In other cases - Clive Jeakins, for example - the rank and file might take the decisions for the leadership. For the real power brokers in the Labour Party, the Basnetts and the Evanses, the parting might be more protracted and distressing. Yes, parting, even there, would have to,

Within the Parliamentary Labour Party the remaining moderates could expect a fairly swift eviction. It has for long been obvious that to Labour's Marxists the merit of a policy lay precisely in its unpalatability to their more democratic partners. Reinforced as they could be in a shrunken party, they would lose no time in achieving purity.

And so the Labour Party would

For the country at large this must be a consummation devoutly to be desired. The sec-saw between Labour governments increasingly manipulated by their Marxist tails, and Tory governments halting the slide to collectivism but hardly making progress up the slope away, from it, would be ended. The country would enjoy a choice of democratic options. Whether that would be to the ultimate benefit of the Tory party is, of course, another

Eight days to stop Big Sister

At the beginning of the election campaign, Labour had an outside chance of winning. It had three things going for it - popular support for many of its economic and social policies (clearly documented by its privately commissioned polls), a large number of undecided voters to bid for, and an appalling government record to hang around its opponent's neck. That Labour is now trailing even farther behind the Conservatives than it was two weeks ago is due to the inadequate way it has fought the campaign. It is still not too late. however, to change its approach and win back support from some of the 5.200,000 voters who, according to Gallup, are wavering in their support for the Conservative Party and the Alliance.

Labour has failed partly because its strategy has been flawed from the outset. Its leaders decided to devote much of the first half of the campaign to attacking the failures of the Government, and the second half to proclaiming the merits of its alternative.

But this master plan, inspired by the success of a similar strategy adopted by the Conservative Party in the last general election, does not take into account the new mood of fatalism that has developed since 1979. In order to make an indictment of the Thatcher government stick, Labour has first to convince marginal voters that its alternative will work
This point should have been brought home after the first week of the election run-up, in which Labour leaders spent all their time savaging the Government's economic performance, particularly its near-crippling record of unemployment. By the end of the week, according to the polls, Labour's lead on the unemployment issue had actually de-clined, while the Conservatives' rating on managing the economy had improved.

Labour had thus led with its highest trump card and still managed to lose the trick. This was partly a consequence of the pedagogic style of some of its leaders. But more importantly, it was because they failed to consolidate their attack by giving prominence to Labour's plan for containing inflation and sustaining growth. When reminded, for instance, of the past difficulties encountered by Labour administrations, they did not immediately outline (unless [ was watching at the wrong time) the new measures for checking imports, generating investment, controlling prices and extending worker democracy and responsibility. Because of this failure, they allowed Conservative propaganda about Labour's extremism and the relentless logic of market forces to go effectively unchallenged.

Last week was intended by party strategists to be devoted to an attack on the Conservative run-down of the welfare state. Instead, it began with headline reports of policy differences between Labour's leader and deputy leader, continued with an attack by Labour's former leader on party policy, and ended with an unprompted attack by Labour's leader on a parliamentary candidate for whom he had travelled miles to: share a platform in support.

The damage that this did to Labour's cause should have been avoided or at least contained, at a . time when most party activists have: submerged their differences and are. desperately trying to stop the Conservatives from winning. Labour's leaders should have nipped last week's press speculation in the bud by immediately clarifying rather than seeking to fudge any ambiguity in Labour's manifesto, and then moved back on the offensive.

Labour is now happily back on the attack. On Monday the party's campaign committee decided to develop a more integrated team approach, but this is merely fine tuning rather than a fundamental change in style.

If Labour is to recapture the lost ground, it must concentrate on presenting effectively its policies for curbing prices and creating jobs. This means going into greater detail-than is currently intended in the party's new campaign theme of "curing makes economic sense".

This needs to be linked to a more radical and abrasive attack on the Government's record. Mrs Thatcher's ministers are not simply bad managers: they are the government of the management class. They have increased unemployment in Britain at twice the international average in order to cow unions into sub-mission. They have increased the number of the poor by deliberately-redistributing wealth to the rich at a time of economic stagnation. They have run down welfare services.

Their bland, evasive manifesto is reticent about the really hair-raising proposals, leaked to the press, that senior ministers have been discussing in private. These include extreme anti-union measures that would bankrupt trade unions, the training of troops to break strikes. government sponsorship of private: medicine and the retention of the NHS only as a Cinderella service for , the poor, and social control mea-sures for the growing army of longterm unemployed.

if some of these proposals are adopted, they will lead to an a cruption of protest, followed swiftly by government retribution as we lumb into a knownd-order society. The only way to avert this is for Labour to prevent a landslide Conservative victory in the next eight day by fighting the right campaign Otherwise 1984 could well prive to be the year of Big.

AT SOCIETY'S SERVICE

believe, a document so steeped in the blood of sacked hospital indexed pensioners that it must be kept away from the electorate's sensitive eye. The half-baked contents of the leaked ministerial discussions of last autumn are of course a boon to the opposition.

Much heat is generated, but no light is shed on how to pay for the over-stuffed social cushion beneath our declining economy. The fact is that there is no agenda, no clear statement of Conservative social policy - and more is the pity.

For the Thatcher Government's one thread of intellectual unity on the social front since 1979 has been its willingness to address the contemporary swell of consumer dissatisfaction with the way the institutions of the welfare state are now run. At times the issue has been subsumed in the Government's unsuccessful bid to control public spending. But at best the first four years of Thatcherism have seen public managers forced to count the cost and consider the effectiveness of the social services. At worst, pay and productivity in health and education have barely been examined. A social security system neither equitable (in its treatment of the long-term unemployed) nor efficient (in its various "traps") rolls expensively on. Regardless of macro-economic circumstances social policy for the next five years must take as watchword managerial strong-mindedness. This principle asserts that health care will be better and cheaper once restrictive practices are tackled in the operating theatre as much as in the hospital kitchens; that public provision. They are how-

The Conservatives' "hidden for both schools and teachers ever, asking for two things: one, agenda" for social policy is, the there is much in the good old a sense of priorities in social opposing parties would have us nineteenth century principle of services (for example to put the payment by results. On one side it quizzes the beneficiaries of porters, classiess teachers and de- social benefits (including sacrosanct child benefit) about their real need. On the other it knocks on the doors of the powerful professionals and says to consultants as to head-teachers: take the responsibility and consequences of the expensive budgets of schools and hospitals. In all this privatization will have a role - but as a tool of imaginative management rather than an end in itself.

Here is the rub for the Conservatives. This managerial agenda - enough to upset the public sector unions, the professional bodies as well as the Labour Party - is a recipe not for revolution but reform. It requires the conviction of politicians at the centre that the public service or benefit is justified and worth collective provision. It embodies a distinction, for example on hospital beds, between those (who include many National Health administrators) who would welcome the selective closure of hospitals as part of a structured plan for beds and facilities, and those with a scarcely qualified dislike of all collective provision, who would see it as another desirable reduction in the public health service.

The public appetite for welfare reform is as sharp as ever. Perhaps more than any earlier time, the Conservatives during this election are carrying with them the hopes and fears of ordinary Britons of - an increasingly out-of-date phrase the working class. These Conservatives, on the best available evidence, are not voting for abandonment of the principle of services (for example to put the care of the elderly at the top of the spending list even if it means cuts elsewhere); and two, an application of strong management, to cut down the layers of administration and sharpen up performance by staff in contact with the public.

To its justified embarrassment, the white-collar union Nalgo commissioned a sample survey during 1982 to test public attitudes towards spending cuts and the social services. The full text of the results are to be published next week in the journal Public Money. They should be widely read, not least by participants in the Family Policy Group past and future.

What Nalgo found was that "the cuts" are not judged harsh or unacceptable, even in the NHS; that privatization was welcome if it implied increased efficiency and effectiveness. The public wants better-run services. 'However," the report says," the consensus was that certain services were essential, and that these the state continue to support". These include health, eduction, care for the old and handicapped. In other words Nalgo found an endorsement for managerial revolution. Let a "hidden agenda" that contains some cogent proposals along these lines be brought forth at once: the public would applaud the Conservative politicians who did so. But for the Conservatives to go beyond (for example to propose universal private health insurance) would be to advance without any semblance of public approval and, eventually, to offend that sense of social fairness which, though diffused by the pains of the recession. remains a noted British charac-

Has the crisis passed, or is it only that deceptive slight decrease in tension which often precedes catastrophe? The former, one must hope, but even so it would be only the immediate crisis that has passed. The underlying dangers remain as strong as ever.

Of the two protagonists, Israel is probably the more unhappy with the tactical situation that now prevails. Her occupation of the southern half of Lebanon is rapidly developing into the kind of war that she likes least, and which her leaders have often of the line. Nor, being unilateral, served notice they will not tolerate: a war of attrition. Israeli obligations towards Israel. The soldiers are being killed in Lebanon, in ambushes and other forms of irregular warfare, at an average rate of approximately one a day.

Most Israelis believe that their army has long since achieved Ariel Sharon were still Israel's whatever it can achieve in defence minister that operation Lebanon and would like to get it might well have been undertaken out. The government has signed by now. Although the American an agreement with Lebanon Government is unlikely to have designed to permit that. But the explicitly authorized it, it has weakness of the agreement is given the kind of signals which that Syria has an effective veto Israel has in the past interpreted over it, and Syria is clearly not as a "green light" for decisive disposed to let Israel off the military action.

To withdraw leaving the would play the role he regards as Syrians in place would look too rightfully hers. Moreover the

Moreover Israel would have legitimate doubts, in those circumstances, about Lebanon's ability to implement her side of the agreement.

Another option much canvassed in Israel is a partial and unilateral withdrawal to the "45kilometre line" on the Awali river, just north of Sidon. It is thought this would be an easier line to hold than the present front, and it would relieve Israel of responsibility for policing the Chouf, with its bitter local feuds between Maronites and Druzes. But that would hardly provide a guarantee against continued ambushes and booby-traps south would it involve Lebanon in any war of attrition would go on.

There must therefore be a temptation to seek a solution by driving Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Lebanon manu militari. If Mr

Assad may feel in a tactically much like accepting defeat. Israeli-Lebanese agreement has saddled him, in the eyes of much of the world (including many Arab governments) with responsibility for prolonging Lebanon's agony. Protected by an impressive new screen of Soviet missiles, he may think that another all-out war in Lebanon would serve his turn, by giving him the benefit of renewed Arab solidarity and forcing the Arab-Israel issue back to the top of the superpower agenda, as in 1973.

Both Israel and Syria, in short, could be tempted by the politique du pire. But the leaders of both countries if they keep their heads, should resist that temptation. Our Jerusalem correspondent reports an increase in violence on the West Bank over the past twelve months, in spite of the destruction of the PLO infrastucture in Lebanon. Can anyone seriously believe that Israel would sustain a lower casualty rate in Lebanon, or would find it easier to extricate herself therefrom, after overrunning the whole country?

For that matter, can anyone seriously argue that the Arabs are better off today for their "victory" in 1973? It is one thing to involve the superpowers in your conflict, and it is quite another to ensure that they produce a solution to your taste. In fact the results are dangerously unpredictable. Even in 1973, the heyday of détente, the Middle East triggered a nuclear red alert. In the present state of international tension such a crisis might be even harder to contain. Both superpowers should already be working actively to parish registers From Mr Desmond Mandeville Sir, May an Irishman comment on Mr Philip Blake's letter (May 27), where he implies that county record offices provide safe custody against fire? Most Church of Ireland parish registers had been (obligatorily) deposited in the Public Record Office, Dublin, by 1922; and when, in the disorders of that year, the office was burnt down, only four out of several hundred registers could be saved.

It was a major disaster, for those that were lost would clearly have survived had they been left in parish custody. Centralized records commonly prove a soft target to war and revolution, and one should not presume Britain to be forever the exception. Mr Blake appears to misinterpret the requirements of the measure, and of the guide which goes with it, regarding older records maintained in parish custody. The measure stipulates a rustproof steel cabinet with secure lock; no call whatever for through ventilation. The guide recommends a timber lining and shelves, partly for climatic control, but partly also as fire protection. Timber as an insulator is better than asbestos - so long as there is insufficient air for outright combustion. Enclosed in its steel shell, if fire breaks out nearby, the timber lining can char sacrificially, starting at the outside, but not catch fire. Provided a fire brigade is called and the fire dealt with (and provided the cabinet is not crushed by falling masonry first), the valuable contents should be well protected. At worst they will suffer a relatively mild kippering, from which they would doubtless recover under skilled conservation treatment. Yours faithfully, DESMOND MANDEVILLE.

68 Hervey Road, Blackheath, SE3.

From Mr F. J. Chopping Sir, The preservation of parish records is essential but parishes also wish to have them available locally. Those of this parish will go to Taunton, 40 miles away. The answer is to have them copied, but the parochial Church Council could not justify the cost. As the retention of records in the parish was considered by the parish council to be in the interests of the area it has made a grant from the "free two pence" rate for 90 per cent of the cost. That it was empowered to do so under Section 137 of the Local Government Act, 1972, has been confirmed by the district auditor.

Yours faithfully, F. J. CHOPPING, North Brewham.

Meeting at the 'Mail'

From Mr Michael Edwards

Sir, In the comments made by your contributor, Christopher Ward, contributor, Christopher Ward, 10day (May 27) on the resolutions adopted earlier this week by the Daily Mail London chapel of the National Union of Journalists, he claims that the chapel's members were "encouraged", and speculates that they were "prompted", by Paul Johnson's statements in the Spectator that "policies are determined by editors and the general consensus of senior staff, themselves influenced by rank-and-file journalistic opinion (and readers)".

Mr Ward has got it wrong. The Daily Mail chapel was not "encouraged" still less "prompted" by Mr Johnson. Their resolutions were a spontaneous expression of their feelings that their sense of professionalism was being offended by the paper's one-sided coverage of the General Election. Mr Ward says that the meeting was attended by 50 journalists. He is wrong again. Between 70 and 80 were present. They did not seek the support of Mr Benn or anyone else. The resolutions expressed their point of view and they were duly conveyed to the editor and the matter rests there. Yours sincerely, MICHAEL EDWARDS. Father of the Chapel, National Union of Journalists, Daily Mail. Northcliffe House, EC4. May 27.

Staffing of Jobcentres

From Mr Tom Otley

Sir, Last week I advertised two jobs for printers in one of the fourteen Oxfordshire weekly newspapers, both stating "previous experience not essential - suit lively young person interested in acquiring a variety of skills and developing a career in the printing trade". I had three replies, two from young men already in employment. There are 17,329 currently recorded as unemployed in the county, 919 of them under the age of 18.

I rang the Jobcentre in Oxford and was told: "Yes we do get one daily local paper but none of the weeklies; but we do not have time to scan it as we have had staff cuts at the Jobcentre, and therefore can cone only with vacancies notified to us directly by employers; now that the unemployed can draw benefit without having to register with us the Jobcentres seek to place only those who get in touch with them voluntarily, and they no longer have to waste time with those who do not really want to find work at all."

If the Manpower Services Commission's response to the despair of the unemployed is apathy, what hope is there?

Yours sincerely. TOM OTLEY. Managing Director, Information Printing Ltd., Eynsham,

Implications of an Alliance revival

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From Mr Christopher Smith

Sir, On page one today (May 30) you have the Conservative chairman saying how his party would govern after a landslide victory and warning that votes for the Alliance might let "the Labour Party into power by accident". On page four you print opinion poll results which account for Mr Parkinson's defensive noises about a landslide. But even the one (MORI) that most reflects the growing Alliance threat makes nonsense of the "let Labour in"

Suppose there is a further swing of 7 per cent from Labour to the Alliance: Con. 46 per cent, Lab. 30—7=23 per cent, All. 23+7=30 per cent. That still gives a Tory landslide. Or a swing of 8 per cent from the Government. Con. 46 from the Government: Con. 46-8=38 per cent, Lab. 30 per cent, All. 23+8=31 per cent. That too would give an undeservedly large Conservative majority.

More probable than either is what Mr Parkinson actually fears - the Alliance gaining from people who would have voted Labour and from those who would have voted Tory. Suppose both these swings happen together. Con. 46-8=38 per cent, Lab. 30-7=23 per cent, All. 23+8+7=38 per cent.

That, surely, is something like Mr Parkinson's "worst case". But how does it let Labour into power? Not in any way, unless the Tories perversely told Messrs Jenkins and Steel that they were not interested in a Conservative government moderated by the Alliance or an Alliance government unmoderated by the Tories: the two things that the electorate would be said to have wanted.

It would not be accident or the fault of Messrs Steel and Jenkins ii they then asked Labour to eat its words and join an Alliance coalition or support an Alliance government. It would not be Labour in power either. As the polls show, only a massive return to voting Labour can let them in.

Can Mr Parkinson really believe his warning? I am, Sir, yours faithfully. CHRISTOPHER SMITH. The Square, Aspley Guise, Nr Milton Keynes, Buckinghamshire.

From Professor Julius Gould Sir. The British are rightly respected for their attachment to existing constitutional forms - even to the extent of guaranteeing free speech to those who seek to subvert the constitution. But are there many countries other than our own in which, at the height of a general election, politicians would busy themselves with inventing a quite novel, and quite bogus, constitutional principle? I refer to the solemn warnings we are now hearing to the effect that a

Death fear in S. Africa

From the South African Ambassador Sir, The letter of Sir Richard Acland and others concerning the conviction of six ANC terrorists (May 19) omits certain facts which are essential to a proper appreciation of their cases. In the first instance, all six persons were tried in open court in accordance with the full processes of the law. The media and the public which had access to the court would inform your readers that allegations that confessions were extracted under torture were duly examined and dismissed by the court. In addition to their convictions for high treason, these persons were also charged with, inter alia, murder, attempted murder, robbery and sabotage. Serious criminal acts of this type are, in most societies, punished by the most severe penalties provided by law. In South Africa, this includes capital nunishment. In all cases where a court pronounces a death sentence, such sentences are automatically subject to review in accordance with a series of defined procedures which include, in the final instance, revisions by the state president meeting in executive

Reporting Lebanon war

From Rabbi David J. Goldberg

Sir, I needs must, with fastidious distaste, respond to the offensive letter which you saw fit to publish from Mr Robert Maguire (May 23). Its combination of pseudo-psychology and ersatz theology has a displeasing provenance, going back to those 19th century anthropol-ogists who solemnly "proved" that Jews were civically unreliable. Since the majority of his letter is constructed round his own fanciful perception of my "negative ethnocentricism" (whatever that might mean), "unconscious disguise", "patriotic ambivalences" and religio-politico "dilemmas", there is no purpose in trying to respond to the vapourings of his imagination. Two points, though, deserve to be made.

Firstly, Mr Magnire produces the phrase "Next year in Jerusalem" as triumphant proof that all Jews are de facto expatriates. That phrase occurs in the Passover haggadah, which tells of the Exodus from Egypt and Israelite redemption from slavery. It is as much a part of the twelve hundred year old narrative as is the opening prayer which says, "This year we are slaves, next year may we be free."

Precisely because any western Jew who now wants to, can indeed go to live in Israel, some modern haggadot omit the phrase entirely, others reinterpret it to mean a Jerusalem of universal brotherhood and peace, still others retain it out of nostalgic tradition. If Mr Maguire knew this, it was malicious of him to misinterpret the phrase. If he didn't, it should demonstrate to him the dangers of ignorantly meddling in another of conscription Tory "landslide" would be faintly improper - if not actually un-Brit-ish. These warnings bring hypocrisy into disrepute when - as is often the From Major-General J. D. Frost Sir, The lack of enthusiasm for a return to conscription as suggested in your recent leading article (May 23) was predictable. Though con-case - they are accompanied by a high-pitched whine that it is somehow unfair to secure, let alone to press, a political advantage. The hard-bitten politicians who advance these notions provide the electorate (perhaps without intention) with a modicum of entertain-ment. But I wonder whether "at the end of the day" (if I may pirate another of their favourite themes...) they will not merit as much contempt as ridicule. Yours faithfully. JULIUS GOULD.

Reform Club, Pall Mail, SW1. May 27. From Mr J. W. Saunders

Sir, Although this seems a dull election with a foregone conclusion, I doubt if electors realise the golden opportunity now in their hands to influence the future of parliamen-tary democracy in Britain. Seldom have we had such power, or the luxury, to cast votes for the best men and women to preserve democracy. Tactical voting is no longer a ploy, but a necessity.

Parliament itself is at stake, not least because of the threatened takeover of her Majesty's Opposition by extremists of the left. The Labour Party has been split in the last years by those who calculate that another five years of Mrs Thatcher will make Britain ripe for revolution (and their calculation is not fanciful. given the unemployment figures).

Not since the seventeenth century (when civil war ensued) have the opposed main parties been so far apart. Extremism is not confined to Labour. Up here in Stockton South we have a Conservative candidate with a National Front past. I would strongly urge all electors to examine the credentials of their candidates and vote for the best parliamentarian on offer in their constitu-

We need to look very closely at those who might be swept into Westminster in a Thatcher tidal wave. We need to support Labour ex-MPs who are fighting their own extremist constituency parties (the election of Pat Wall in Bradford North or Terence Fields in Liverpool Broadgreen would be a disaster for Parliament). Especially in those constituencies where the Conservatives stand no chance, the only effective way of ousting an extrem ist is to vote SDP/Liberal Alliance.

Waterloo wasteland

From Mr M. D. Cockburn Sir, The South Bank sites are described in today's Times as "one of the most flagrant of postwar planning disasters" and Cedric Price has been chosen to find the remedy. May I suggest to him that the whole length of the river bank, from the GLC to the Hayward Gallery, should be used for terrace housing. one house deep, with a few gaps to allow views of the river and a few-pubs with terraces onto the river. The houses could be let medium term leases (and if this requires an Act of Parliament, so be it). It is now obvious that our climate and natures are unsuited to the large expanses of promenade which now front the various halls, and that we are much happier with the more intimate glimpses of the river which are still to be seen on few remaining "domestic" stretches of the Thames, east and west. Yours faithfully,

With the coming of spring flocks of cuckoos have migrated to New York's theatres, and one is about to land on London. Joseph Papp's staging of Tho-mas Babe's Buried Inside Extra. The New York Shakespeare Festival's exchange for the Royal Court's production of Top Girls, is not exactly a fair trade, but not entirely a swindle either. It depends on how you look at it.

Mr Babe's play covers the last night of a newpaper whose city editor has neglected to tell any of its 427 employees of the closure until shortly after the curtain rises. As the final edition rolls off the presses and a bome-made nuclear device hidden in the building ticks away, the editor (Hal Holaway, the editor (Hal Hol-brook), the woman's page editor who has been his mistress for 20 years (Dixie Carter), a young reporter (William Convers-Roberts), an aging copy boy (Vincent Gardenia) and, briefly. he editor's wife (Sandy Dennis) hash over personal relationships while making stabs at finding the bomb, ordering out for hamburgers and drinking a lot of bourbon. Much of the action and relationships remains unclear, and judged from a sober perspective the play can be called a mess. But taken on its own terms, as one must take the restaurant scene of Top Girls, it has a strange kind of appeal The action begins at 3 am and runs through the small hours when rules do not have the same clarity as they do in daylight, and it is in this mood that Mr Babe writes. His story and characters have no meaning beyond themselves, like Caryl Churchill's - they have no more dimension than a boozy bow to The Front Page - but they embody an American quality quite savoured in the perfomance. Hal Holbrook - as he ages looking ever more like Rodin's Balzac with mischief in his eye - and Dixie Carter, a and would play best without strutting, smoky-voiced temptress, make this crack brained comedy more representiative of an American eaglet than a Theatre as the final offering of the Broadway season. Peter Nichols's Passion, a slightly reworked version of Passion Play, is both worse and better than its RSC incarnation.

It is incomparably worse in its set - a dull beige country-house interior which smacks of a small budget - and somewhat worse in the casting of two actors who look at least a decade younger than the hus-band and his alter ego are supposed to be. This seriously undercuts the middle-aged marital crisis of the play. The miscast actors, however -sardonic Bob Gunton and seductive Frank Langella - with Roxanne Hart as their young Loreli, play together as if connected by an electric current stimulating all their senses. Their magnetic mixture makes the sexual passion of the play almost palpable. The RSC production probably served Mi Nichols in more depth and breadth, but the sensual allure this version is formidable.

The point of concerts, Robert Palmer says in the programme note to his present tour, is that the response of a live audience lets him know whether or not he is going in the right direction. This may be a rationalization, since Palmer's music has always been notably self-contained and (despite its creator's reputation for style) immune from the undifferentiated influence of

A large and young audience at the Wigmore Hall on Monday was a fitting tribute to the musical wisdom still being passed on in college and practice-room by cellist Joan Dickson and pianist Joyce Rathbone. Their philanthropic musicianship has extended, too. to commissions, the latest of which is a Grand Duo by Priaulx Rainer, receiving its first London performance on Monday night.

It is a true duo, in its interfertilization of forces surpassing even that of the Brahms E minor Sonata with which the programme ended. And it is certainly Grand: bold in its virtuosity, confident in design, and passionate in its

Court life with Henry VIII

The Renaissance at Sutton Place

This exhibition, which runs until September 15, celebrates the 450th anniversary of the visit of King Henry VIII to the house, then recently completed for Sir Richard Weston, an astute and experienced courtier who had previously served under Henry VII. As Dr David Starkey, historical adviser on the project, points out in the catalogue.

The principal exhibit in The Renaissance at Sutton Place is the house itself. The red brick and terracotta exterior, little altered since it was built is one of the glories of the early Renaissance in England."

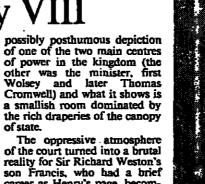

The interior has been much altered, however, not least under the present owner, the Sutton Place Heritage Trust, formed in 1982 when Mr Stanley J. Seeger, who had bought the property from the Getty estate, decided to take up residence abroad. His collection of contemporary works of art has been installed in the house, setting up what may be described as cultural tensions which are sometimes stimulating, as for example the presence of three huge canvases by Francis Bacon in the Great Hall, but occasionally disconcerting, as the Prince of Wales wryly hinted in his speech opening the exhibition. The painting of the panelling on the staircase pale grey and pink is less successful, being neither historical nor attractive.

The exhibition is in the lower gallery, formed in the nine-teenth century by Norman Shaw and now fitted out to museum standards for this purpose. The airy, elegant arched structure devised by Barry Mazur seems totally at variance with the message of the exhibition itself, namely the splendours and miseries of Life items of armour, including a at the Court of Henry VIIL The curious Masque Helmet, probtiny drawing of Henry VIII ably made for a jester.

One of the most effective and touching sections of the exhi-bition is a case of material relating to Anne, whom Dr Starkey views not as Sir Roy Strong's "gangster's molf", but as an intelligent and forceful promoter of French culture and. paradoxically, religious reform. Her coronation, in 1533, was partly devised by Holbein, three pages of drawings by whom are included in the exhibition, taken from a sketchbook which belonged to Sir Hans Sloane, whose collection formed the nucleus of the British Museum. Anne's Book of Hours contains affectionate inscriptions to and from the king, while her Music Book was compiled by the king's favourite musician, Mark Smeaton, who as a commoner was so cruelly racked at the time of the Queen's trial, that he signed a spurious confession before being hanged, whereas his betters were beheaded.

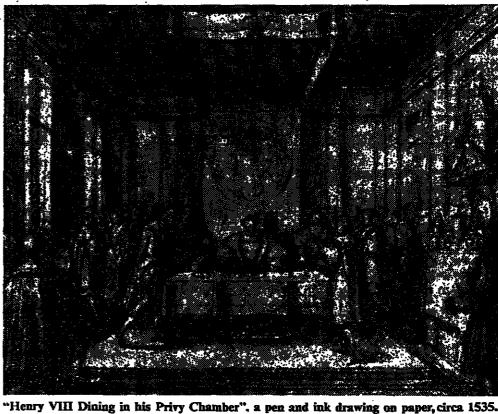

By a happy coincidence, the sale of the Boleyn family home, Hever Castle, has dramatically extended the scope of the exhibition, since the purchaser of the celebrated Armour of Henri II, Mr B. H. Trupin, has allowed it to be included, together with various other Jeffrey Daniels easy to come on a set and maybe you're tired or you're having problems with the director or the part and there are all these people there for you to take it out on. You can yell at them and they have to take it. You can make all kinds of demands - you want a bigger trailer than this person, or you want your own hairdresser. It's a way of trying to exercise some power in a powerless situation. But you can go way over the

In her next film, Afr Mom Garr plays a wife who goes out to work while her husbaand stays at home and looks after the children. Together with Sting II and One From the Heart, it represents her transition from supporting actress to leading lady. I am trying to think of myself for more lead parts now. Yes, I'll play the mother, yes, I'll play the sex symbol; yes, I'll do all those things to get a foot in the door. Having some kind of status is relatively new to me, but I don't kid myself I'm a star. There's a script I'm getting about Emma Goldman, the early American feminist, about the time in her life when she was young, bright, witty - a forceful personality. I'd love to do that but I don't do right now."

Perhaps not, but Garr's Oscar nomination as Best Supporting Actress for Tootsie (she lost to Jessica Lange) signals her new visibility. Garr being Garr, She is not so sure. "I think they made a mistake", she says, deadpan, "I'm not the sort of person who should be nominated. As soon as I heard about it. I scheduled an appointment with my psychiatrist."

company where 1982 losses touched $12.1m pushed the shares down by 10p to 76p.

A profits slump at Incheape Group from £65m to £50m knocked the shares to 316p. down 4p on the day. A poor contribution from the group's international trading businesses was held to blame. On the USM, Godwin Warren, the car park barrier manufacturer, made a roaring start with the shares trading at a premiun of 10p above placing price.

On the bid front BTR announced that it had bought another 275,000 Tilling shares in the market last Friday. Tilling shares remained unchanged at 225p on the news. Fears that Linfood Holdings, the Gateway supermarkets company is about to launch a full bid for food group. Fitch Levell, took 6p off the share price bringing it down to 280p. Oils were a slow market ahead of BP's first quarter figures tomorrow. BP shares were unchanged at 390p reflect-ing market sentiment for the sector. However, Tricestrol fell by 8p to 214p as hopes of a takeover bid faded.

STC wins £100m order

Standard Telephones Cables, the fast-growing electri-cals group, has won a record £100m order for sub-contract work on Plessey's Ptarmigan communications

Plessey, which is prime contractor to the Ministry of Defence for the manufacture of Ptarmigan, will share the work between STC's defence systems division in Greenwich and the sub-systems company Paignton, in Devon.

Mr John Cottrell, managing director of STC's communications division, said that the manufacture on the transmission and subscriber equip ment for Ptarmigan would involve 300 STC employees over the next two years with the prospect of more orders after

Fed rate fears dominate

New York (AP - Dow Jones) Stocks rebounded from their early lows yesterday and the pace of trading became light, which analysts said, showed an absence of selling pressure despite bad news about the money supply last Friday.

The Dow Jones industria average was off about 2 1/2 points. It was down 7.55 earlier. Advancing issues trailed decliners by about 5 to 8.

Concern about last Friday's $2.1bn increase in the basic money supply dominated the market's attention.

"There is a fear the Fed may move to react to the rise in the money supply", Mr Monte Gordon, research director of Dreyfus Corp. said. "There is a concern that interest rates may be at least temporarily trending higher.

"It is curious that it is almost race of the the increasing pace of the recovery that is increasing this concern about interest rates," he said, noting that rising demand for credit would put upward pressure on rates. The Commerce Department reported its index of leading economic indicators rose 1. per cent in April, the 10th consecutive monthly rise. The Department also revised its March figures, saying the index had acutually moved up 2.2 per cent rather than the earlier estimate of 1.5 per cent. Raiston Puring was the most active issue in early trading, down 1/4 to 21 1/8. Duke Power was second, down 1/8 at 23 after a block of 327,600 traded at that price. AT & T was

Companies rapped over bid leaks

Sugar rises to two-year high

Strong speculative demand for futures contracts and some panic physical buying pushed London sugar for August delivery up to over £200 a tonne yesterday, £13 more than last Friday's price and the highest for two years.

The price closed about £3 a tonne below the peak, but there is widespread belief in the trade that the momentum gathered over the past six weeks is not spent. Sugar dealers attribute the price rise to a combination of bad weather restricting supply and speculative interest partly generated by chart and A combination of wet weath-crop in Europe and the Sovier Union and drought in South Africa and Queensland, Australia, two major cane sugar exporters, has lowered estimates of the 1982-83 crop. Mr Steve Vincent, statician for Woodhouse, Drake and Carey, sugar traders, estimates that a world crop of just over 97 million tonnes could yield a surplus of only 5 million tonnes. If this rate of decrease in the surplus continued into the next season the market could be in balance at the end of 1984 for the first time in several years. Mr Tony Bromovsky, analyst er which has harmed the beet Carey, argues that the possibility of supply being tight has encouraged speculators.

Nevertheless, he said: "I think the speculators have jumped the gun. Nobody has the slightest inkling that the market could roughly double in six weeks". It is understood that there has been heavy buying by Hongkong traders usually active in the gold market.

But the £7 jump in the London daily raws price to £187, and in the whites price by the same amount to £207 a tonne yesterday points also to some emergency physical buy-

Hopefully a more normal tax charge this year together with improved profits should boost earnings to about 26p. Last year the tax charge was raised by losses in some companies which could not be offset by profits elschwere.

Currency movements lifted the results by about £6m, which was rather better than expected. But this year the weaker pound should stop further currency gains - so far the effect has been broadly neutral. Last year the effect came almost entirely in the second half with a gain of MEPC only £1 m at the interim stage.

The sale of the Toyota business in Malaya - a decision Inchape was pushed into for political reasons – raised £9.3m. But this is masked by a book loss of £12.9m from companies now treated as investment instead of associates. However, the sale of the Toyota interest and the Australian building company beined reduce borrow-£70. But it does not seem likely that Inchape will be this year.

Profits in South-east Asia, probably Inchape's single most important area have been almost maintained at £21.3m against £22m, a fair result considering the area has seen little growth.

In the United Kingdom, both Inchcape has come out of the Mann Egerton and Toyota are figures. The British insurance orse than expected.

Growth in the Middle East will not see much growth until demand for oil increases. Central charges have suffered from the decision to increase the contribution to the pension fund by £5.5m for three years. Inchape is more confident about the future than it was, but real recovery is waiting for an improvement in the US where interest rates could fail this year. The year will see little improvement in trading profits at least until the second half but loss elimination will mean profits of about £60.

Nimslo, the 3D camera group, has lost substantially more than it budgeted for in 1982, according to figures released vesterday. The loss has emerged at $12.13m ($7.78m).

It was expected the group would at least break even during its fist full year of selling its new camera product. The fact that it has not is blamed squarely on the Timex factory in Dundee which was contrac-ted to produce 200,000 to 260,000 cameras in 1982 but in fact only produced 30,000. This left expenditure on marketing way ahead of adequate sales. The shares nevertheless dropped 5p on the stock exchange to 81p - just 6p off their all-time low. In view of the scant statement released to the stock market on the figures, this is hardly surprising. Shareholders have been provided with little information on which

of the Nimslo system in France and Belgium. The company was selling what is described in its promotional film as "a miracle". Whatever it received from that it was more than swamped by an unexplained extraordinary debit which added another $2m to the company's pre-tax losses.

Rights to the Nimslo system in France and Belgium were sold to a company controlled by the Norwegian business tycoon, Mr Fred Olsen. He has also provided a prop for the Nimslo share price over the past year by buying in stock as it has become available Mr Olsen is now believed to own around 70 per cent of the capital.

The Nimslo dream as originally visulized must surely be over. Back in May 1980, for instance, when the company tapped United Kingdom fund managers for another £7.1m to bring the revolutionary camera to market, we were told that profits in 1982 could reach $20m. Investors though warned of the projects risk were also told that profits of $98m could be achieved by 1985.

All that was a long time ago and when the company made a very poor Unlisted Securities Market debut in December 1981 such ambitious projections were officially played down. The company has clearly fallen well behind its schedule on selling its product. Its move to aquire 45 per cent via an assets swap of Berkey Photo, a conventional US film processing and camera distribution After-tax figures, apparently group, is in these circumstances understanding.

like to argue. As it is, there is starts thinking about it only some scepticism about the when a bid has struck. "The some scepticism about the effectiveness of advertising campaigns launched after a bid has been made.

The problem is that by that stage it is usually two or three years too late", according to Mr Reg Valin, chief executive of the corporate communications agency Valin Pollen. "The horse has already boited. Many of the companies that find themselves on the receiving end of a takeover bid have not taken the chance to run a comorate campaign and have missed the opportunity to build awareness of their strengths.

"You can spend considerably less money if you advertise earlier on than you will if a bid is made", says Mr Simon Dixon, client services director of Charles Baker CBC, which is handling Tilling's corporate campaign, though not, as it happens, the "don't seil" cam-

If you are in regular communication with your shareholders and the people who influence them - not just by advertising but through all the various means available you can raise your share price and the company will be less attractive to bidders, he said.

"It still comes down to price in the end. If a company is worth 100p and someone is wiling to pay 300p, there is no way that the bid can be stopped."

Mr Valin agrees that there is a limit to the amount that skilful communication can do institutional shareholder is no mug. If a company's perform-ance has been bad for many years and someone comes along with a better record, there can be little doubt which way it will go. The much-publicised Spillers-Dalgety battle was a case in point. Despite the fact that Spillers used Fred the Flour Grader to put across its points very imaginatively, its profit performance was so poor that nothing could save it.

If the bid is defeated, the money spent will have been worth it in management's eyes If the bid is successful, it is the company taking over that will ultimately pay the bills.

One of the most successful defensive campaigns - though one which was eventually lost was that by British Sugar against the S & W Berisford bid in 1981. The campaign, by Charles Barker CBC, took the form of speech balloons on a black background, arguing the

"To win, Berisford needed 42 per cent of British Sugar's shares and though it built up its shareholding to 39 per cent, it could not gain the vital extra 3 per cent", Mr Dixon, says.

Tilling's corporate campaign has now ended, after its twoweek blitz, but the "don't sell" campaign will continue until the outcome is decided. What is certain is that, whoever wins, everyone knows a lot more about the Thomas Tilling Group of companies than they for a company, particularly if it ever did before.

Salient points from Mr. P.W. Turcan's States

As forecast in the last annual report and in the interim report, earnings per share are down from last year. The board's decision to increase further during the year the overseas content of the portfolio has inevitably reduced the portfolio yield, and it is probable that the present rate of dividend will not be covered by earnings in the current year. Shareholders will, I hope, accept that if the satisfactory trend of capital performance can be maintained, a static dividend for a limited period is not an excessive price to pay. The yield on the present dividend still exceeds the yield on the F.T. Actuaries' Investment

At the time of writing, all the stock markets in which we are interested are making strong progress, with record levels being attained. This is reflected in the value of the company's essets, up from £16.2m in 1982 to £24.7m in 1983. Evidence of a general recovery from recession is now beginning to be seen, and the portfolio is constructed to take advantage of such a recovery.

Rugby must look out towards a changed world

An embarrassing truth

DAVID MILLER

As the inevitable flow of commercial efficient once again hits the rotary blades of Rugby Union hypocrisy, all with doubt and shame, it is worth asking who is trying to protect what on behalf of whom. There is every evidence that the rugby auth-orities are in danger of failing to learn from the experience of other sports when attempting to withdraw their heads, eyes tightly closed, from the jaws of commercialism.

Looking about them at the unedifying world-wide examples of chaos wrought by greed and double standards which afflict other sports such as cricket, tennis, soccer and athletics, rugby officials in both hemispheres, together with some internationl players, no doubt consider they are justified in adopting a posture in defence of amateurism which is at once honorable and Indicrous. "Until we have some difinite evidence, there is nothing to discuss" says Mickey Steele-Bodger, an English representative on the International Rugby Football Board, referring to the projected £20m Australian cir-"Unless we have positive proof, we won't budget in my view nothing has changed," echoes C. A. Blazey, the New Zealand chairman.

I earnestly suggest these worthy gentleman should take a look out of the window, where they will obseve the world has indeed changed sice they were in short pants - a fact long since tacitly recognized by their Welsh and French counterparts, Mr N. E. Richards, managing who have been the relectant members of rugby's equivalent of the Flat Earth Society. The Welsh and French know the truth, but feel embarrassed to tell the others. It is, of course, easy to sympathize with the enthusiasm exhibited by such players as Ian McLauchlan, of Scotland, who, though debarred along with Bill Beaumont and Mike Burton for having written a book, devoutly believes in maintaining rugby's allegedly amateur status at the top. Yet the fact is, unpalatable though it may be to rugby internationals, that the Union game has traditionally enjoyed the greatest prestige, sporting and social, for the least, comparatively speaking exper-

Notwithstanding the OCstill command the stage as in Rugby Union.

By its rigid code of amateurism, deporting professionals to Rugby League, the Union game has in fact preserved an artificially low standard of performance. The fundamental error which Union officials are now making is to believe that their game is by definition amateur, when what it is in fact is a game which they would like to keep amateur. There is no copyright on the Union code, which in theory is as open to professionalism as any other.

The second error is suppose that you can oblige people to be amateur, when by definition amateurism is a voluntary condition which is rooted in a man's mind. This is where the likes of Messrs confemantary players do not think as they do.

It was an acceptance of this fact which persuded cricket, then tennis, and finally soccer in England to abolish the amateur distinction. Athletics and skiing are in the uncomfortable process at this moment of doing: likewise, and it would be fair to say that the true dividing line between sportsmen today is notwhether they accept money, but the amount of time they devote to their sport.

No sportsman today such as Sebastian Coe can reach the top without devoting himself to fulltime specialization and thereby ieonardising other career prospects where they continue to exist in parallel. Oxford and Cambridge Blues may not always understand this (The sportsmen, such as the Welsh captain, Eddie Butler, who has rejected the Australian enticement, will always be an exception; Butler could not enjoy his dual role were he thefront office manager of a busy hotel, say) This is the nettle which rugby has to grasp, and which Bob Weighill, secretary of the RFU, is dangerously ignoring when he says: "If the cream had gone sour, then let us get rid of it."

However much rugby is right to fear the evils of professionalism, which are increasingly apparent in other sports, it absurd for them to suppose that they can afford to lose 200 top international players without damage to their game. The factor on which they base their probably false optimism is that the commercial bait in rugby is not so much the individual because of the comparative lack. of technical skill I have memtioned - as the concept of England or France as a team. A commercial circus with 200

palyers would be purchasing that team concept in the package, That is why I believe the rugby establishment is illadvised to continue to reject the World Cup being offered on behalf of clients by Neil Durden-Smith. There lies, I am convinced as an outsider, : rugby's chance of keeping the ... mutiny at arms length, of creating a new focus and an incentive to stay on board. What 1. the establishment would have to do is go some of the way casional birth-given genius of a recognizing what Durden-Smith Gareth Edwards or Barry John, euphamistically refers to as "the in no other major international proper treatment of star players words those benefits other then the direct match fee. I believe rugby would be seriously advised to consider a series of trust funds for its international players, similar to that operating in athletics, in which the national federation takes a percentage of commercial fees for the benefit of the game from what would effectively be permit players. In this way, the existing establishment could still hope to maintain control from within, and the sharp end of the game would become stronger instead of weaker. It would be axiomatic that such permit players would be allowed back into ordinary rugby and grass-roots coaching.

John Lawrence, secretary tothe Lions tour, referring to the Steele-Bodger and Blazey are circus, insists: "Anyone found out of touch with reality. Most out will be banned. We will international uphold amateurism to the bitterplayers do not think as they do, end." Unless there is some sort f we are to believe reports, and of sensible compromise, that therefore what they preside over end will probably be more bitter, is necessarily, and sadly, a more damaging and more swift than some suppose.

two cliches as they regard the lack of distinction in their win by 26 points distinction in their win by 26 points to six, three tries to none, over an eager but unskilled Mid Canterbury side on a firm, fast field yesterday.

The first is the rugby adage that every touring team is permitted to play one game which, for want of a better word, can only be described as a "stinker". The second is the stage legend that a bad dress rehearsal is inevitably followed by a rehearsal is inevitably followed by a successful opening night - In the Lions' case, the first international against the All Blacks on Saturday. All these things considered, however, the Lions should have won with style, rather than with only one really good try, and with Dusty Hare banging away to score four penalty goals and one conversion from 11 attempts.

Otherwise the Lions seemed more able to devise ways of not scoring tries. In the first half they did this by having Clive Woodward or Gwyn Evans on the left wing thrice dropping the vital pass.

In the second half either John Rutherford or David Justin desired. Rutherford or David Irwin decided

THE *** TIMES GUIDE TO THE DERBY

All set for the master of the roller-coaster

Tea-leaves and entrails might provide better guides to today's Derby than the form book, such has been the havoc caused to the racing programme by the recent weather.

Michael Phillips looks at the available evidence on the 204th running of

in November, the whittling-down process ended yesterday when 23 runners were declared for the 204th Derby Stakes at Epsom today. When the final composition of the field became known, the shock was not so much the absence of the onetime favourite Gorvtus, sad as that was, because his trainer Dick Hern had warned all along that he would withdraw him if he considered that the ground was too soft. A much great catastrophe was the discovery early yesterday morning that the principal local hope. Kuwait Tower, was coughing. Following his encouraging run in the 2.000 Guineas and a particularly fine gullop last Saturday, he had been very strongly fancied indeed to become the first Epsom-trained winner of the Derby for 51 years as well as the first grey to win it since Airborne in 1946.

As a result of all this Joe Mercer, who was to have ridden Kuwait Tower and is still seeking a first Derby triumph after a he won at Lingfield, Teenoso

All those qualities will stand him in good stead this afternoon when I expect Piggott to try to turn this into a war of attrition and put the pressure on his principal rivals earlier rather than later. Judged on the way that he won at Lingfield. Teenoso will not be pegged back easily in the straight. Furthermore, he has the ability to be clear of trouble early on.

Team of every talent

Last year's Derby-winning triumvirate will certainly be among the favourites today. John Karter talks to Robert Sangster, Vincent O'Brien and Pat Eddery

THE OWNER Treating it

as a business Pressed hard enough. Robert Sangster, pools millionaire and racehorse owner extraordinary. will admit that he regards Salmon Leap as the pick of his imprecedented quartet of runners in today's Derby.

Sangster, who has already Minstrel and Golden Fleece. says of the majestic chestnut with the three white socks: "Apart from the fact that he is unbeaten, he has a look of eagles and tremendous presence. But", he adds, with tongue firmly in cheek, "if I tip him, people will say, Crafty bugger he's just trying to push out the odds out on Lomond!"." There is a serious side to the joke which illustrates that, like O'Brien, Sangster feels frequent accusations in the press of undue secrecy over his runners are unjustified. "You simply cannot win", he says, "For example, Golden Fleece coughed 18 times before last year's Derby. If I had gone rushing off to a phone and told the newspapers, the odds would have drifted from 3-1 to 6-1 and punters would have burnt the stands down when he won."

Sangster also has the perfect answer for those pious people who accuse him of turning horse racing from a sport into a business. "It is a business", he says. "What would you do if you had the choice between syndicating a Derby winner at stud for £10m or keeping him in training, with all the attendant risks, to carn a maximum of perhaps £400,000 in prize money as a four-year-old?" ### THE TRAINER Looking for a kind eye

Six Derby victories have done Tipperary's legendary Bally-

The process by which the great trainer selects his Derby candidates comes in three painstaking study of pedigrees, thus immediately reducing a catalogue of, say, 400 blue-blooded individuals to 80 or so possibles. "The chances of getting a Derby winner out of a to three or four by a study of their conformation: crooked legs or too long a back or neck are just a few of the defects In the final analysis, though, doyle, however, they know him which will cause the animal to the eyes have it. ### THE JOCKEY Playing the race by ear

Pat Eddery made the acquaint-ance of the Derby course, which he describes as the most difficult in the world, in 1969 as a raw seven-stone apprentice having his first ride in public. The horse was Alvaro, trained by Michael Pope, and the 17year-old Eddery handled the famous mile-and-a-half switchback like a veteran.

At yesterday's Derby gallops, however, Eddery intimated that heavy ground could lead to a last-minute switch to Salmon Leap. Should he do so, he believes that he will be in for an equally exhilarating ride on the powerful chestnut. The choice between the two horses has, he says, been the most difficult of

Facts and figures

The Derby will almost certainly be sponsored by a foreign company next year. Two major overseas organisations are involved in talks at the moment with United Rececourses, the stage managers of the Epsom

"The Jockey Club gave us the go-ahead earlier this year to find a sponsor to the Derby and Oaks and we hope to sign up a deal by September." Tim Nelican, Managing Director of United Racecourses, said. The package for the Derby totals £600,000, and that includes sponsorship of the classe and all on-site advertising rights.

Six Jockeys riding in this year's race have won the Derby at least once before Lester Piggot, the most successful jockey in Derby history, has eight wins. Pat Eddery two, Willie Carson two and Walter Swinburn, Greville Starkey and Yves Saint-Martin one each.

Only four greys have ever won the race, the last being Airborne in 1946. Cock Robin and Shearwalk are the two greys involved this year.

With six previous victories, Vincent O'Brien is the most successful trainer of modern times. But he needs one more winner to equal the record held jointly by Robert Robson, Fred Darling and John Porter. Five other trainers with runners this year have previously saddled the winner. They are Dick Hern (twice) Peter Walwyn, Michael Stoute, John Punlop and Alec Head. Three American jockeys ride this year - Steve Cauthen, Willie Shocmaker, Cash Asmussen, The last American to ride the winner was Frank O'Neill on Spion Kop in 1920.

Welcome return to show ring

By Jenny MacArthur

Robert Oliver is back in the addle for the hunter classes at the Royal Bath and West Show at Shepton Mallet which starts today and continues until Saturday. Oliver has been absent from the show ring so far this season because of a burst appendix in January, followed by a second operation three months later. In his absence his wife, Gill, has ridden for him. She is now judging in Zambia so Oliver's reappearance is timely.

Today's hunter weight classes are to be judged by Richard Matson from Shropshire. He has replaced David Howie who is unable to judge owing to illness. The most interesting confrontation will be in the middleweight class between the South Essex Insurance Group's seven-year-old Elite, the star of the season so far, and C R Sanderson's appearance of the season. Glebstawi, who is ridden by Oliver, was the leading middleweight last season. Elite, ridden by Vin Toulson, has had a winning season so far and was champion hunter at the Newark and Notts and at the Shropshire and West Midlands Show. Today will be the season's first meeting of the two middleweights.

Britain's top showjumpers, including Malcolm Pyrah, Caroline Bradley, Stephen Hadley, Lionei Dunning and Nick Skelton, will be descending on the Brita and West. descending on the Bath and West for the full programme of show jumping classes sponsored by Babycham, Radio Rentals, Everest Double Glazing and Cockburn Special Reserve. ### Knight to rescue after day before

By Peter Ball

CHELMSFORD: Essex (7pts) drew with Surrey (4). In the altermath of Surrey's in the altermatin of ourrey's calamitous first innings on Monday, Chelmsford yesterday morning was full of activity, even independent television cameras turning up to pick over the bones of the disaster and hoping that they would witness a re-run. But it was never likely that such memorable events could be repeated and the match duly petered out as Surrey, at the second time of asking, found the application to bat out the day.

The outcome was predictable even before heavy overnight rain delayed the start until $2.30. Whether even the lost hour and a half when a least offered the half, which at least offered the opportunity for extended post mortems, would have given Essex the time they needed to bowl Surrey out on a pitch which grew easier and easter may be doubted

All Surrey had to do was to put their heads down, a situation made for Clinton who batted throughout the four hours for his 61. Knight ept him company for all except the first seven overs.

The first over hinted immediately that it was to be a different game. At one stage on Monday evening. Surrey's scorecard read eight for eight. Yesterday they reached that score without loss in six balls. Briefly, the hint seemed misleading as Foster and Phillip used the new ball well enough for Surrey to be dangerously placed on 20 for two at

After lunch was another matter. The puch still offered a fittle belp to the seam bowlers, but the heavy atmosphere which had been so helpful to swing the previous evening, had been dispersed by the breeze which accompanied the sun, and there was little reason why good hatsmen should not occupy the crease for some time.

Knight and Clinton, accordingly. did so. Clinton accumulated slowly in ones and twos. Knight was more positive and also more vulnerable in the early stages of his innings, surviving one appeal for leg-before from Phillip which looked very close and being beaten outside the off stump by both pace bowlers.

Folley, left arm over the wicket, accounted for Boycott, O'Shaughnessy, who makes the ball leave the bat, was the most successful. Abrahams made a busy captain and the fielding was tidier than Yorkshire's had been. Off the third ball of the day

Lumb, trying to drive, was caught at the wicker; so, soon afterwards, was Athey, off a good ball from Allott. During the day there were, perhaps, a dozen appeals for leg-before. Of these, two went in the bowler's favour, the first against Boycott when he was pushing half forward. From a distance it looked neither more nor less out than most of the more nor less out than most of the others. Love went the same way immediately after lunch, the ball keeping a shade low. Whereupon Bairstow and Carrick added 73 at a run a minute. Whatever Bairstow does it is done with spirit. For that he was conspicuous in this Yorkshire side. He eventually chopped on to O'Shaughnessy, as did Carrick after batting for two

Unclear but sunny end to Tomatin

After a series of five extremely varied races, there was still no obvious clear-cut winner when the Tomarin series ended on Locit yesterday. The short list for the selectors to consider would have included Starry Starry Night (David Blackiaws), Local Hero (Geoffrey Howison), Tom Bombadil (Jonathan Money), Pandamonium (Tom Mackie) and Hilvador (John Connelly). All had an impressive string of results, but which had, in the opinion of the race committee. given the best performance of all the competitors called for much deliberation.

By mid-day today, Tarbert will have reverted to being a sleepy little fishing village after playing host to about 1,500 people during the past few days. This minth Tomatin series has been the best supported yet, and there is a real danger that any further growth could bring problems in its wake. Apart from the difficulties of organization and logistics, popular regattas attract professional sailors and when they appear, sportsmanship sometimes takes second place to winning.

There were one or two protests this year that would have been unheard of in previous regattas. It would be a huge pity if the very success of the event led to a change in its change. in its character. However, the final day ended with both the Loch and competitors in benevolent mood. The last races started in rain and ended in sunshine, with a good sailing breeze at all times. The day's results confirmed the series winner and thanks to the conditions, there were few hard-luck stories or

Jimmy Connors, champion of Wimbledon and the United States, has been beaten in the quarter-final round of the French championships for the third consecutive year.

Connors has played here seven times without reaching the final.

Yesterday's defeat was the most humbling he has suffered in a Grand humbling he has suffered in a Grand Slam tournament since he came to the fore a decade ago. He was beaten 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 by Christophe Roger-Vasselin, aged 25, who has a French father, an English mother and was born in London.

Roger-Vasselin is 6ft. 2in tall but weighs less than 12st. A lean, bony man with a modest, rather shambling bearing and a charming man with a motest tantification shambling bearing and a charming manner, he has long been regarded as exemplary in the way he has made the most of natural talents that, at this level of competition, are by no means exceptional. The rankings suggest that at present there are eight better players in France and a 129 better players in the world. Roger-Vasselin was a little lucky to get into the draw here but has since seized his chances. Yesterday, rather like Arthur Ashe in 1975 Wimbledon final, he deserted his. witholeton man, to describe instantial, attacking game because he thought the best way to play Connors was to deny him the speed on which he thrives and try not to make mistakes. He nagged away at Connors' forehand and it worked perfectly because, as has often been

Roger-Vasselinn, mind you, is not one of the game's outstanding counter-punchers and it always seemed possible that Connors might take charge if he gambled on all-out attack. But Connors did not do so. There was a flicker of hope for him in the third set, when he had two points for a 5-1 lead. "In that set I let up mentally", Roger-Vasselinn said later. "I was dreaming. Then I felt tired physically and thought I would let the set go. But I had a few lucky breaks and got my concentration back."

Mandlikova eventually yielded rather despondently and was beaten 46, 6-3, 6-2.

Mrs Lloyd's next opponent will be Andrea Jaeger, who beat her 6-3, 6-1 in the same round last year. Miss Jaeger, who will be 18 on Saturday, bad a 6-2, 6-2 win over Gretchen Rush, aged 19. Miss Rush, who was checked by Miss Jaeger at the same stage of the United States championships, is in her first year at Trinity University. For a long time it seemed that this might be a thoroughly bad day for the United States and the two-fisted backhand. In the quarter-final round of the women's singles, Hana Mandikova, unpredictable though she was, often looked a much more gifted and versatile player then Chris Lloyd But competitive ability is 50% character and it should be noted that Mrs Lloyd had won 10 consecutive matches against Miss Mandlikova at the cost of one set and, moreover, had never been beaten before the semi-final round in any of the 30 Grand Slam tournaments she had previously

Election brings market uncertainty

As we approach the final week of the election, the housing market has paused in its general upward trend to take stock of what the individual parties have promised to home buyers. I said a fortnight ago that from the owners' viewpoint, this latest political wrangle had little to

Certainly the latest Royal Insti-tution of Chartered Surveyors' house price survey indicated a large element of uncertainty caused by the election. The RICS recognized the hesitancy felt by many people in the market over the future of extra tax relief on home loans, which could disappear if Labour wins.

The most frequent question anyone involved in the residential market is asked is how far will property prices increase this year? Even though some parts of the country, such as the North, have already clocked up increases of about 8 per cent, the overall average, according to Savills, is unlikely to be much higher than 10

Writing in the firm's summer issue of its magazine, Mr Geoffrey van Cutsem, a partner, says he believes the market is on a knife edge. "The London and country house markets are poised on a knife edge which is keeping agents, vendors and purchasers alike on tenterhooks, as they attempt to predict the pattern of prices." Despite all the indicators, such as a shortage of good property, in-creased confidence and generally more money about, Mr van Cutsem believes we will not see runaway

"Logically, the combined effect of increased confidence and a shortage of stock is a sharp rise in prices, and yet we do not believe we are going to see a repeat of the to be admitted that the arguments either way are fairly evenly balanced."

The impression one receives from talking to agents across the The unemployment rate is also country is that there is a shortage of not conductive to a rapid price van Cutsem says that so far this

This 18th century Palladian villa 10 miles from Dublin is being sold by the Seafield Trust for around 1R2650,000 (2540,000). Situated on the north side of the Mallahide Estuary, the main house has four reception rooms, seven bedrooms and four bathrooms. Set in 178 acres, the walled estate includes staff quarters, four cottages and a modern cattle yard. The joint agents, Knight Frank & Rutley and Ganly Craigie of Dublin, say the property would be suitable as a stud farm.

But even Mr van Cutsem would agree that the present shortage is somewhat artificial, because many vendors do not seem to have got the message of improved market conditions and are holding back in expectation of a better price later in

The market is also seeing two or three severe dampening effects. Mortgage and other lending rates runaway country house markets of are still extremely high and are 1972-73 or 1977-79, though it has likely to continue in the 10 to 14 per cent range for the foreseeable future. While present rates are lower than they were a year ago, they are still extremely high.

properties in some price ranges. Mr escalation, as Mr van Cutsem notes: "The huge pool of unemployment year, agents are reporting they have inevitably has a dampening effect up to a third fewer houses to offer, on the market and, according to all and they are especially short of known forecasts, will be no lower good period houses.

The present mortgage availability is not helping prices either. In some parts of the country mortgage queues are up to 16 weeks, while But in the middle reaches of the Savills believe that the bottom and top ends of the market will show the greatest growth this year. Housebuilders are pegging prices, and any increase in mortgage tax threshold will generally help the first-time buyer, especially in the South east.

the general average is now between 10 and 12 weeks.

More expensive property which appeals to the foreign market has benefitted from weaker sterling, which during the last six months has made British property up to 15 per cent cheaper purely on exchange movements. From 1980 until late 1982, the foreign buyer has seen a virtually static residential market in this country, and Savills believe more foreign purchases are likely.

property market prices are being generally dampened by economic and mortgage uncertainties. And it is here that Savills believe price rises will be lower, although much will depend on local market conditions. A period of relative prosperity, combined with lower interest rates, will do much to give this area of the market a much needed boost. Vendors hoping for even larger increases during Autumn may be disappointed, and the general message from estate agents is sell now while the going is good and market conditions are

10,000 seek Esso oil jobs

By David Young

Esso has received inquiries from 10,000 people for 200 jobs at its new petrochemical plant

Esso began an advertising campaign a month ago for 200 technical staff for its Mossmorran plant being built near

A company spokesman said:
"It is quite staggering. We sent out almost 10,000 application forms in response to inquiries and already 3,000 have been returned completed."

A team of 15 management staff is now interviewing applicants and carrying out aptitude tests in Kirckaldy and Glasgow. Those who pass face two more interviews before a final selec-

JUNE X 83 Foot £1bn blunder on NIS charge

It was confirmed in Labour quarters last night that Mr Foot will over the next eight days concentrate much more on Labour's proposals for creating jobs. There will also be more weight given to the proposition that only the Labour Party can be trusted to safeguard the National Health Service.

The change in importance became apparent in speeches over the past two days when Mr Foot either failed to mention nuclear disarmament or made any passing references.

In two speeches on Monday, at Hampstead and Paddington in London, the disarmament issue, of which Mr Foot has spoken so passionately, was given only a couple of minutes at the end of each speech.

Yesterday morning in brief talks at working men's clubs in Coventry he failed to mention When Mr Foot was questioned by reporters about the shortening of his speeches on disarmament he said nothing

Kidnapped Britons look forward to freedom

By Henry Stanhope, Diplomatic Correspondent

Four young Britons from the Save the Children Fund and other foreign relief workers abducted by guerrillas in Ethiopia last month, should be released in Sudan next weekend, according to reports from

The reports quoted a spokesman for the Tigre People's Liberation Front (TPLF) as saying they would be handed over to their embassies in cooperation with the Sudanese authorities, after arriving in authorities, and Khartoum on Sanday.

Television Independant Television News film yesterday showed the group to be well and cheerful when they were recently located in Western Tigre, Ethiopia, by reporter David Smith and a cattera crew. Mrs Sybil Barrett, mother of one of the kidnap victims, Miss Alison Barrett, aged 25, from Bexleyheath, said yesterday after seeing the film: "It was marvellous to see Alison looks so well. She really looked like her old self, smiling and talking.,"

The other three are: Miss Libby Grimshaw, aged 39, who was coordinating the fund's relief work during the present drought and famine in the area; Mr Charles Douglas, aged 28, from Cambridge; Miss Clare Davies, aged 35. Others in the group include two Irish nurses, two Italian nums and an two Italian nuns and have been threatening in an act of municipal vandalism, to pull down the town's most famous monument. This is the much-loved, mid-Victorian, mock Gothic folly in the town centre: St John-Stevas.

Chelmsford's most enduring landmark

Frank Johnson's campaign trail

Mr Norman St John-Stevas has been a landmark since becoming the Conservative member for Chelmsford in 1964. The Liberals claim that he serves no useful purpose in the modern world. They want him concreted over and replaced by one of the party's replaced by one of the party's featureless, purely functional community politicians of the kind to be found in any English town since the Modern Movement made so much of Britain identical to the rest. He is Mr Stuart Mole. He

He is Mr Stuart Mole. He looks young – I would say about 17. He was once the personal assistant to the only slightly younger Mr David Steel. Being a community politician, Mr Mole is said to be unbeatable on blocked drains. Had be played his drains. Had he played his cards right, he presumably could have become Chekms ford's top plumber. He hopes to be carried to Westminster on the flood tide of effluent which, as a community politician, he has released in the

Mr St John-Stevas is useless with a drain. Surely, he should therefore stay in Westminster and Mr Mole should stay in Chelmsford minding the drains. But no. Chelmsford's drains are no loner big enough for this ambitious young man. He covets dominion over the drains of an entire nation.
But the citizens

Chelmsford are fighting the proposed municipal develop-ment. They have formed an action group to preserve Mr St John-Stevas. It is a typically Betjemanesque cause. It calls itself the "Chelmstord Con-servative Association". Some of its members were gathered around Mr St John-Stevas as he paused in the Rose and Crown at lunchtime yesterday.

"I hope you haven't been to see Mr Hole", he said, on noticing me. It is a point of honour with Mr St John-Stevas never to get quite right the name of anyone of whom he disapproves.

Mr St John-Stevas imparted the news that he had just been voted by Woman's Own the most charming MP and the one with whom readers would most like to dance. No, he did

The Liberals, having won control of Chelrusford council did not matter, because it had in the May local elections. would most like to send to the moon", he added with satisfaction.

We set out to canvass Fitzwalter Place. This was a spot to inspire all lovers of the home counties. It was an Arcady of superbly-tended front gardens and gleaming door knockers.

"Good afternoon, my name is St John-Steval and this is my assistant, Mr Johnson," he said to the first woman on whom he called, a Mrs Margaret Standish. She was voting for him. "Is there a gentleman who has the honour of being Mr Standish," inquired the devastating charmer known to readers of Woman's Own. There was, and he would be voting Tory. "Oh, come in," said the next woman whom he confronted, at a house displaying a St John-Stevas poster. "Alas I am working," he replied. As we moved on, I expressed we moved on, I expressed admiration of his technique. We met an elderly man tending a garden. He gladly offered his vote, but said he offered his vote, but said he lived in Barrow-in-Furness. Mr St John-Stevas replied that that town's Labour MP, Mr Albert Booth, was a bore and very nice. The man agreed that he was a bore. We pressed on. "Oh good old man." murmured Mr St John-Stevas, "how well in thee appears the something, something, of thy antique years - As You Like It."

We came upon some children. James White, aged seven, said he would vote for Mr St John-Stevas, who inquired about his education.

James pointed to a little girl. "She goes to a Catholic school I go to the Christian one," he explained. "The two are not mutually exclusive," Mr St John-Stevas said.

Suddenly, Mrs Phillips from the Conservative Association hurried down the street to explain that the woman who had invited him in had done so because he was supposed to take tea with a group of supporters in her house. That explained everything. Mr St John-Stevas apologised for the hitch. "It was all due to The Times", he said.

We moved in the direction of tea. A man apologized for wearing a brown rather than blue suit. But Mr St John-Stevas thought it appropriate. "Crushed Mole."
